Eastwood to appeal denial of request for rezoning

By FRANK GEORGE

FORMER MAYOR and film star Clint Eastwood will appeal a recent planning commission denial of a rezoning request for his new building to the city council.

'If we're asked to change one lot, we'll be asked to change another and another.'
— Barbara Lysle

The commission unanimously denied (by a 5-0 vote), a rezone request — from resident-commercial to commercial — for Eastwood's new building on San Carlos Street at its Sept. 26 meeting. Prior to the hearing, commission chairwoman Carla Ramsey and Commissioner John Kennedy reluctantly excused themselves from the proceeedings, due to conflicts of interest.

Commissioner Brian Congleton's motion for denial also included a request for direction from the council on future rezone rulings.

"Somebody out there really wants to make it very difficult for us," said Congleton, referring to the number of rezone requests the commission has been getting lately. "But I don't know that we have the right to go against the city and allow one applicant to rezone as he will."

A large crowd filled the city council chambers that Wednesday night, and half the audience left after the Eastwood decision.

Representing Eastwood, Carmel developer Alan Williams said he thought use permits went with the land. The buildings that stood where the redwood-faced complex now sits on the west side of San Carlos had commercial use permits before they were razed.

The new structure, however, rests entirely in the resident-commercial zone, which was created by a city ordinance in 1984. This boundary is supposed to act as a buffer zone between the business and residential districts. Buildings in the resident-commercial zone must house resident-serving businesses only.

The actor wants to rent five of the spaces in the building to commercial interests, but he'll offer four sections to mom-and-pop-type, resident-serving ventures.

"Clint and Maggie (Eastwood, who along with Roy Kaufman of Los Angeles, shares the title to the building), are offering long-term leases that are very desirable to local-serving stores," said Williams.

Several people addressed the commission, complaining about the negative effects such a rezone might have.

'Clint and Maggie (Eastwood) are offering long-term leases that are very desirable to local-serving stores.'
— Alan Williams

"Further erosion of the resident-commercial district is injurious to residents of Carmel," said Ben Heller of the Carmel Residents Association. "This limitation of the resident-commercial district is to preserve an area of local-serving interests. We are operating under the present General Plan."

Work starting on Carmel Valley low-income senior housing project

By DAVID LELAND

WORK HAS officially begun on the long-awaited, $13 million senior citizens project in Carmel Valley.

Formerly known as Carmel Valley Overview, the 200-unit rental project for low- and moderate-income seniors is now called Pacific Meadows.

The name-change was made because those marketing the development, slated for a December 1991 opening, believed that there were already too many projects and businesses beginning with "Carmel Valley," according to Ray Parks, project architect.

The 15-acre Pacific Meadows is located within a 350-acre parcel on Carmel Valley Road about 1-1/2 miles east of Highway 1, near Del Mesa Carmel.

Work was originally slated to begin last summer, but complicated financing arrangements caused a delay, according to Parks.

Pacific Meadows is now being funded, in part, by Wells Fargo Bank. Additionally, Delaware-based Intrust, an organization that helps fund non-profit groups via tax credits, has promised $6.9 million.

Still unfinanced are a dining hall and covered walking area, which Parks said should receive funding sometime this winter.

Long-range plans call for a skilled nursing home on the property.

"It's something we always wanted but the government won't pay for that sort of thing so we put it on hold," Parks said.

Pacific Meadows will be operated by Oakland-based American Baptist Homes of the West, which manages about a dozen facilities on the West Coast.

The organization is non-sectarian and is no longer church connected. Once day-to-day management of Pacific Meadows begins, the group will be known as Carmel Senior Housing, Inc.

Plans call for a blend of studios, one-bedroom and two-bedroom homes — all with kitchens and private patios. There will also be a shuttle bus service in operation for rides into town.

Rents will range from $325 to $440 a month.

Of the 200 rental units, 30 units will be located in a single building for a higher level of care; three buildings will house 110 units; and the remaining units will be constructed in seven two-story units.

Also planned are an administration building, maintenance building and manager's residence.

At least 60 percent of the units will be deemed low-income housing. That percentage will rise if grants to the Rental Housing Community Program are approved, Parks said.

That agency has already given $75,000 toward helping lower rents, Park said.

In Monterey County, low-income status can be given to: single people earning less than $19,450 annually; families of two earning not more than $22,220 annually; families of three earning not more than $24,950 annually; and families of four earning not more than $27,750.

The 235 unused acres of the parcel will be managed by a park agency as open space, Parks said, adding that it will then be possible to hike

Enlightening letters

Dear Editor:

Wasn't that a fantastic letter written by Anne Morgan in the Carmel Pine Cone of Sept. 27? Forceful too! It's not too difficult to discern on which side she is.

It woke me up. Here I was, asleep at the switch, entirely unaware that the CIA started the whole thing, so our president could increase his approval rating, currently about 80 percent.

Now the president has not only Iraq, Cuba, Libya, and the U.S. Congress to deal with, he also has Anne Morgan. Look out George!

Good thing I read Anne's letter, I might even consider voting for Alan Cranston, if he has the nerve to run again.

Thank you for printing all these enlightening letters.

Giving sanction

Dear Editor:

Re your article on water for Pebble Beach by Frank George.

To call the Professional Golfers' Association the U.S. Open's sanctioning body, is rather akin to having the pope head up the Southern Baptists.

The U.S. Open is and always has been run by the United States Golf Association.

Prudent or impudent?

Dear Editor:

Today I received Advice Letter No. 355 from the California-American Water Co., Monterey District. Its title is "Notice of Rate Increase by California-American Water Co."

This title puzzled me at first because the final paragraph of their letter refers to the "proposed" increase. But then I reread their quotation of paragraph 2 of PUC Decision No. 90-08-055:

"2. California-American Water Co. is authorized to file an Advice Letter for its Monterey Peninsula District, to implement a surcharge to recover revenue losses incurred due to the imposition of mandatory rationing. The surcharge shall be computed and implemented in accordance with the method and guidelines set forth in this order."

My puzzlement was then resolved as I realized that Cal-Am's "proposal" is precisely the same thing as receiving PUC approval. In other words, Cal-Am doesn't ASK for an increase, Cal-Am merely TELLS the PUC they are going to increase charges. If paragraph 2 were in plain English, it would read like this:

"2. If mandatory rationing is imposed on Cal-Am's Monterey Peninsula customers, Cal-Am may file an Advice Letter to tell the PUC that it is going to charge its customers more per hundred cubic feet of water. The amount of the increased charge has already been decided and can be found elsewhere in PUC Decision No. 90-08-055. This is so that Cal-Am's income will not be adversely affected by the rationing of its customers."

Now that I understand what Cal-Am's letter means (and I'll welcome corrections from anyone if I've misinterpreted either the letter or paragraph 2), I still have three questions.

1. Why doesn't Cal-Am hold down its (our!) expenses by simply announcing the increase along with its next bills?
2. Is it PUC's policy to write decisions such as No. 90-08-055 so as to abdicate any PUC authority or responsibility over specific "proposals" such as this?
3. If so, is this prudent policy?

I can make a difference

Dear Editor:

The earth is my home and it is special to me,
I want to protect it and care for its needs.

The earth sure could use my two helping hands,
To safeguard the water, the air, and the land.

By putting my trash where it should be,
I'll keep the earth pretty for others to see.

By keeping pollution out of the water, I can save animals like the sea otter.

By collecting newspapers, bottles and cans,
I can recycle instead of filling the land.

Conserving water is another good deed,
I'll carefully use just the water I need.

To show the earth how much I care,
I can plant a tree where the land is bare.

By walking and car-pooling when I move about,
I will save energy which also helps out.

By trying each day to show that I care,
I will clean up the land, water and air.

With helping hands and good common sense,
I truly can make a difference.

Pink Cadillac theme of party for youth center

CARMEL YOUTH Center's annual fundraiser, the Spaghetti Western Barbecue, has shifted gears and has become the Pink Cadillac Party.

The event is set for 6 p.m. Friday, Oct. 5 (NOT Oct. 15 as has been reported elsewhere), at the Carmel Youth Center located at Fourth and Torres in Carmel.

Pacific Meadows housing project gets underway

"You need to prevent any seeming capitulation through power and influence," Carmel resident Barbara Livingston told the commission.

Also on hand were proponents of the rezone.

"I think we've had pressure on the commercial district that led to changes that were different from what we intended," said attorney Michael Albov, representing Leidig-Draper Properties. Albov and others maintained the resident-commercial zoning has resulted in an escalating rent problem in the business district.

"We have created a nightmare of moving local businesses out of town," said resident and businesswoman Connie Laub. "We're zoning people right out of their businesses. Only the corporations who are willing to pay the highest rents are able to operate here."

The commissioners admitted they were having a difficult time with the vote, saying they hated to let such a good deal for small local merchants slip by.

Supporters of the rezone declared Eastwood would surely appeal the denial to the city council.

"Grant the application, because it's going to go to the council regardless of what you do," Albov said.

"I'm the tip of the iceberg," said Williams. "I hope sooner or later some sort of reasonable planning can prevail."

Vice-chairman Stephen Poohar concurred with Williams, but admitted, "We may be stuck on our current ordinance and our current General Plan."

Williams denied allegations that the owners might persuade the commissioners to vote in their favor because they're rich and powerful, saying, "I'm going through an orderly process as designated in the design codes, just as anyone else would."

Commissioner Barbara Lysle, however, was not enthusiastic about the rezone.

"If we're asked to change one lot, we'll be asked to change another and another," she said.

The planning commission denial is the latest in the series of obstacles that have stood in the way of the building, which is located next to Eastwood's Hog's Breath Inn restaurant. A ruling several years ago by a previous commission denying the design of the building prompted Eastwood into running for mayor in 1986, a position he won handily. Several other problems have plagued the building over the years, from design flaws to questions about its size and height.

Planners will reconsider development of Murphy land

By FRANK GEORGE

ONE OF the largest housing project proposed in Carmel the past several years, including two low-income apartments, will be reconsidered by the Carmel Planning Commission on Oct. 17, the commission decided last Wednesday.

Ten apartment and 10 condominium units are slated for construction on the west side of Junipero between Third and Fourth by Robert Murphy of Carmel.

"It is a large project for Carmel," Murphy admitted. He added the commission simply needs to get a better understanding of the project.

The site is currently occupied by Harbor Welding, and a spokesperson for the small plant said they are planning to move to Monterey.

"Actually, it really worked out good for us because we outgrew the place," the spokesperson said. She said the decision to move was made independent of Murphy's plans.

"My concern is density," said Commissioner Lindsay Hanna. "This is the maximum build-out permitted by law." He recommended the removal of a couple of the buildings because Junipero Street is one of the main thoroughfares through town.

Commissioner John Kennedy said the design review committee, which consists of three members of the commission, should study the project at length and work toward reducing its mass.

Fearing the loss of the viewshed from the Vista Lobos observation deck across the street, Comissioner Brian Congleton said height poles showing the spacial impact of the buildings should be erected on the site.

Murphy said building and planning department staff had told him he could get a density bonus for the project if he included affordable housing. Associate Planner Brian Roseth said applicants with incomes less than 50 percent of the county median would qualify as tenant candidates for the two apartments.

Elwood Williams of the Housing Authority of Monterey County said the median income for the area is $35,400, and affordable housing agreements normally call for rents not exceeeding 30 percent of the tenant's salary.

The commission had previously reviewed the housing development in January and again in April. New buildings had been proposed for the site as early as 1985, but an environmental impact report was ordered in the area by the city council in 1989.

Roseth said since Murphy is going to provide two affordable units, he can also build three extra market rate units.

"As projects get larger in size, they become more attractive to contractors," he explained.

THE SITE on Junipero Street and Fourth where Robert Murphy of Carmel wants build 10 condominium and 10 apartment units. The space is currently occupied by a welding company. (Frank George photo).

The commissioners will discuss recently continued projects at the Oct. 17 special meeting, according to Congleton. He said he is not sure if the commission will vote on the Murphy development at the meeting, but he is optimistic about the project.

"I think the project is going to sing once we have this round-table discussion with the applicant," he said. "I like the project, personally."

Change of venue sought in Little Horse Ranch case

By DAVID LELAND

IF WILDLIFE in the creeks below Little Horse Ranch survive the winter, it will likely be owed to a fifth year of drought conditions, not the expediency of the court system.

'There have been varied results. The law on this question has not been decided.'
— Peter Kaufman

Despite extensive court documents filed citing danger to wildlife in Wildcat Creek if erosion control measures are not realized on Little Horse Ranch, a civil case pitting the state versus John Murphy, Jr. dragged on this week.

Also named as plaintiffs in the case are the state Coastal Commission and Monterey County.

Attorneys for Murphy, who owns Little Horse Ranch, this week cited a little-known state law in seeking a change of venue from Monterey County to either San Benito County or Santa Clara County.

Essentially, the law allows for a change of venue for any city, county or public agency if it is involved in a lawsuit against the Coastal Commission.

The law was originally written after the 1976 Coastal Act, when jurisdictions began bringing local coastal plans before the Coastal Commission for certification, according to Peter Kaufman, deputy attorney general. Kaufman is representing the Coastal Commission in the case.

In writing the law, legislators feared that if a city within a county's local coastal plan felt it was receiving unfair treatment, it would make sense to move the case outside of the county, Kaufman said.

Charles Keller, defending Murphy, is convinced that the law also applies to private parties.

Case law is ambiguous when it concerns private parties seeking refuge under the law.

"There have been varied results," Kaufman said. "The law on this question has not been decided."

But Kaufman was vehement that Murphy should lose this round because he has already sought refuge in the court, which disallows him from seeking a change in venue.

Moreover, if a change of venue is granted, "There is no reason to take it out of the coastal zone," he said.

Deputy District Attorney Morgan Taylor concurred with Kaufman in that the law only concerns governmental agencies.

Superior Court Judge John Wunderlich has set a hearing for 9:30 a.m. Friday, Oct. 12, to rule on the motion.

IT HAS been almost two years since the Monterey County District Attorney's office accused Murphy of allegedly grading 14.5 miles of road on his Little Horse Ranch.

While winter drought conditions have plagued area water users, the dry weather has proved a blessing for environmentalists monitoring Little Horse Ranch and the alleged damage that occured from moving 27,400 cubic yards of earth.

The 5,000-acre Little Horse Ranch is located in steep coastal mountains roughly eight miles south of Carmel, east of Highway 1. Elevations range from about 1,000 feet in the lower portion of Wildcat Canyon to nearly 3,500 feet along ridge roads.

The issue of erosion control on the ranch has been tossed about in court since December of 1988, when charges against Murphy were initially filed.

In October of 1989, the Murphy agreed to file an application for an emergency coastal development permit for erosion control measures.

Dale Ellis, county zoning administrator, approved Murphy's permit later that month, attaching certain conditions.

The state Department of Fish & Game reviewed Ellis' conditions and "detrimined that those conditions were essential to protect fish and wildlife resources," according to court records.

After a hearing, the court ruled that the defendants must continue working with the county to come up with a workable erosion control plan.

Subsequently Ellis ruled that no erosion control could take place on the property unless it took in all the measures of the county's emergency coastal development permit.

The Coastal Commission concurred with Ellis' ruling in March of this year.

On Sept. 14, a working plan for erosion control and prevention was submitted to Murphy.

Prepared by Arcata-based Pacific Watershed Associates, the report received the blessing of zoning officials and Department of Fish & Game.

The report said that erosion control work could be accomplished in about eight weeks – it could also be accomplished during dry periods of the winter months.

According to court documents, the defendants refused to carry out the working plan.

"As far has we're concerned he has no other options," said Kaufman, adding that Murphy already agreed, in theory, to comply with the zoning administrator.

The total cost for the project, which would be borne by Murphy if he lost the case, would be $265,545, according to the report.

Three-unit condo project delayed until new design is resubmitted

By FRANK GEORGE

A THREE-UNIT condominium project with an underground parking garage on Mission between Fourth and Fifth avenues was continued by the planning commission pending the submittal of a new design.

Hawaii native Cedric Choi saw Commissioner Lindsay Hanna cast the only dissenting vote in a 5-1 decision (with commission chairwoman Carla Ramsey stepping down because of a conflict of interest), that sent his project back to the drafting tables last Wednesday night.

"I don't like it for Carmel and I don't like the location," said Commissioner Barbara Lysle. "It's three buildings so narrow and tall in a row."

Commissioner Brian Congleton found the project crisp and clear, but he also questioned its locality. He said he didn't think it would blend in with the village's aesthetics.

In spite of the initial defeat, Carmel architect John Thodos was happy with the ruling on his client's project.

"I was very delighted by the response we got with the three 'yes' votes," Thodos said, referring to the first vote for approval that resulted in a tie, with Commissioners Lysle, Phil Coniglio and Stephen Poohar dissenting (with Ramsey stepping down). A simple majority is needed for approval.

Thodos said his strategy for the next meeting involves putting an extra effort into making the project appear "softer" to the commissioners. He said he felt he didn't adequately explain the building materials and he will try to convince the commission that the project has a Mediterranean theme rather than a modern one.

Coniglio explained the commission chose to send the design back because they can't discuss designs at the meetings. He said the overcrowded agendas do not allow for that.

"But you can't just tell them 'no' and expect them to know what to do," Coniglio said. The trip back to design review gives the applicant "something to go on," he added.

Coniglio also said since Choi's project was heard toward the end of the meeting, the commissioners couldn't put as much time and effort into helping the applicant come up with an acceptable design.

An earlier blueprint of the project was approved by the commission last summer, but Choi elected to pursue another plan and hired Thodos. The new architect said Choi didn't like the interior of the old design and he didn't appreciate the way the buildings crowded his neighbors.

Thodos thinks the commission should appreciate Choi's efforts because he spent $30,000 on the first plan and decided to scrap it out of respect for his neighbor's comfort. He said the latest commission ruling stated the revisions could not exceed the parameters of the earlier approval.

Since the existing permit was granted on June 28, planning rules state that Choi and Thodos have until Dec. 28 to demolish the building and begin construction. If they can't meet this deadline, they will have to submit a new application and the plans will be subject to current guidelines.

Thodos is confident he and his client will meet the cutoff date, saying, "It's a matter of how many nights we work."

Council struggles with wording for ballot measure

By FRANK GEORGE

AT AN often wild and boisterous meeting, the Carmel City Council asked the city attorney to come up with new wording for the controversial floor area ratio ballot measure at the November meeting.

The decision (4-1, with Councilman Jim Wright dissenting), was made after an hour and a half of discussion on the issue, which was not heard until after 9 p.m. at the council's Oct. 2 meeting.

Although City Atty. Don Freeman was directed by the council to compose new wording for their final approval, the council agreed on language that says the city's General Plan and the residential zoning ordinance shall specify a floor area ratio (FAR) of either 40 or 45 percent for homes in the residential district.

Voters will be asked to pick either 40 or 45 percent FAR in the March 1991 election. The council almost reversed its decision to put the issue on the ballot at the meeting, but the motion to reconsider the issue failed 3-2, with Wright and Mayor Jean Grace dissenting.

"I decided to try to reverse the decision on the ballot because there was such a debate and argument over the language," said Wright, who made the motion to take the issue off the ballot.

The debate got to the point where councilmembers were discussing the wording of the ballot measure with members of the public who addressed them at the podium. One council member said people argued about the language because they wanted the wording to sway voters toward their viewpoint on the issue.

In other action, the council unanimously approved the charter for the landlord-tenant committee, which was created at the September biennial budget meeting. Fifty percent of the new group will consist of Carmel residents, and others on the committee must at least own property in the city limits.

The group will consist of landlords and tenants from the commercial district, and their goal will be to discuss ways to implement policies in the city's General Plan that say resident-serving businesses should be encouraged. The city has become alarmed because the number of local-serving businesses has decreased in the past several years.

The committee will draft a written report and present it to the council next March. Each councilmember and the mayor will appoint two members to the committee.

Attorney Michael Albov asked the council if it could let lawyers represent committee members at committee meetings. This suggestion was met with little enthusiasm.

In other action, the meeting came close to getting out of hand at one point. Local developer Doyle Moses broke into tears as the council revoked an encroachment permit for his property on Fourth Avenue.

Moses had appealed to the council in August a planning commission decision denying an encroachment permit for a planter strip in front of his home on Fourth Avenue. The council granted him a permit at the August meeting, but under certain conditions, which the city later determined he hadn't met. The city then put the issue on the October agenda for the council's consideration.

The council voted unanimously (5-0) to revoke the permit.

"I feel like I've been through the Nuremberg Trials and the Nazis won the war," Moses said. "This is hateful politics. Pitiful village idiot politics."

In presenting reasons for removal of the permit, city staff said the planter strip in front of Moses' house does not conform with the character of the neighborhood. They also said Moses would not agree on a new plan for the planter.

"I don't like being likened to the Nuremberg Trials," said Councilman Bob Fischer. In voting to rescind the permit, Fischer said he saw a lack of compliance with the conditions placed on the encroachment permit.

"Anybody that does anything in this community is attacked," said Moses, who fidgeted in his seat as the council cast their votes.

Grace said revoking the permit will relieve Moses of the problem, "because he will no longer have the problem."

The encroachment must be removed at the applicant's expense by Nov. 2. The city will do the work if action is not taken by then.

In other business, the council unanimously denied an appeal of a planning commission decision concerning the removal of a pine tree on property owned by Josie Ybarro.

The house is on Torres Street, and the council directed the Forest and Beach Commission to check the tree's branches and root system. Fischer said he was concerned about damage to the house that the tree might cause.

In other action, the council approved (4-1, with Wright dissenting), the closing of Ocean Avenue for two days during a street fair in April of 1991. The fair is the brainchild of the Carmel Business Association (CBA).

In a separate unanimous vote, the association was directed to present plans for shuttling fairgoers up and down Ocean Avenue. They also were asked to poll businesses to see if they liked the idea of such a fair. The CBA will present their findings at the November city council meeting.

Volunteers are backbone of valley fire department

By SUSAN BECK

CARMEL VALLEY's fire department is exceptionally strong because it operates as a volunteer unit supported by a paid staff.

That's the philosophy of Robert Heald, fire chief of the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, who has encouraged the strong involvement of the department's 32 volunteers since he started as chief 11 years ago. His move to Carmel Valley was a promotion after eight years of service in the San Diego Alpine Fire District.

The "supportive" paid firefighting staff includes Heald, Kalani Fonseca, who maintains the department's equipment and vehicles, Jeff Trapp is in charge of training the volunteers, and Jeff Frye handles the department's fire preventation program throughout the community.

Sharon Weiss is the station's director of administrative services. She performs secretarial and administrative duties, but "is no way a secretary," said Heald. He stressed the importance of her position, which "verges on that of assistance chief."

The Carmel Valley firefighting volunteers get together for training exercises every Tuesday evening. Their training building is also used as a club house for social gatherings such as barbecues and family days.

The volunteers, as a group, get paid an annual stipend that pays for their social events and upkeep of the club house.

Heald said that the department is considering adding six more volunteers. All of the station's volunteers are men, however, several women have applied, and may qualify for the new positions.

The first tests for qualification are basic physical agility exercises such as climbing ladders. This also determines if a person is afraid of heights. For ascertaining the possibility of claustrophobia, the department has a truck the size of a moving van that is equipped with an enclosed maze of small crawl spaces.

If there are no apparent problems at this point, the prospective volunteer must show they can pull the large and heavy fire hoses. Then there is an interview that assesses the applicant's level of dedication and ability to find the time required to be on call as a firefighter.

Heald always takes the time to inform the applicant and their family about the potential dangers of helping to put out fires. Coal miners and firefighters share the number one spot for high risk jobs in the nation, he tells them. Some of the risks, in addition to those directly related to fighting a fire, include lung disorders, pneumonia, and heart attacks.

Once qualified, the initial firefighting training requires 80 hours. The Emergency Medical Technician training takes another 120 hours.

After training is completed, the new firefighters become part of the long history of volunteers who have worked for the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, which was established on Dec. 6, 1946. The original name was the Tularcitos Fire Protection District, but was changed to avoid confusion with another department. In 1977 the old firehouse was torn down and a new station was built on the same site at 28 Via Contenta.

THE STATION'S "iron," as the firefighting equipment is referred to, is parked, polished and always ready to go. All of the engines use diesel fuel.

The Carmel Valley Fire Protection District has more than $1 million of equipment and vehicles "sitting on the floor," said Heald. The fire engines alone cost about $200,000 each.

There are two wildland, 29-foot, 12-ton fire engines. The oldest engine is a '75 Dodge and the larger new engine is an '89 International. These engines are designed to traverse over dirt roads and grassland. In the valley these engines will last up to 25 years, said Heald.

In addition, there are two American LaFrance fire engines for structural fires. Each engine holds 500 gallons of water. There is water tender truck that contains 1,500 gallons of water, used mainly for transferring water to the fire engines.

An ambulance, a rescue squad vehicle, and a state-owned fire engine make up the rest of the department's fleet. The state provides about 100 engines throughtout California as part of the State Disaster Plan. Heald said that his department has assisted in battling fires from San Diego in the south to Humbolt County in the north.

An especially important piece of "iron" is the small trailer that refills each man's breathing apparatus, similar to a scuba tank, at the scene of a fire where smoke or hazardous fumes exist. The average time for refill is 15 to 20 minutes.

Each wildland engine has two pumps. One pumps larger amounts of water at low-pressure and is used for structural and stationary operations. The other pump puts out small amounts of water at high pressure to fight grass fires while the engine is moving.

Most of the hoses are made with a double jacket cotton exterior. The hose used with a structural fire engine has 24 individual 50-foot sections. When connected the hose extends 1,200 feet in length, a quarter of a mile.

The department's budget is funded exclusively by Carmel Valley property taxes from the approximately 5,500 to 6,000 residents in the valley's fire district, which covers everything between Garland Park and the Sleepy Hollow sub-division, said Heald.

Fire volunteers

A certain percentage of the total taxes taken in, somewhere in the neighborhood of 17 percent of every dollar, makes up the department's budget, said Heald. The county collects the revenue, and acts as a bank with a separate account for the station. He said the fire department operates independently.

Seventy percent of the services provided by the valley's fire department are responses to medical emergency calls. Heald encourages residents to ask for help whenever they are in a situation that is out of control.

There are some animal rescue calls, but "We don't rescue cats out of trees anymore because there has never been a case where a cat skeleton was discovered, which means they can probably get down OK," said Heald.

Valley firefighters do, however, respond to numerous auto accidents. But increased traffic congestion between the signal light on Carmel Rancho Road and Highway 1 to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula is delaying the ambulance arrival time by four to eight minutes, said Heald.

This is especially true during the rush hours of 7:30 to 9 a.m. and 4:30 to 6 p.m., said Heald.

"When a person is injured, time is critical. The delays are not substantial, but even a minute can be detrimental. Generally, we can cut a path down the middle, but we all know it's not going to get better."

Heald does not know what the solution is, but it is obvious to him that the congestion is a symptom of increased numbers of people in the area. The growing population is also presenting another problem for the valley's fire department.

The frequency of back-to-back ambulance assistance calls has increased from once a month to once a week, said Heald. At the same time the county wants to eliminate an ambulance.

"Nuts to that," said Heald. "From the taxpayers' standpoint it would save money, but then we would be providing less service. There aren't too many people asking for less service these days."

There is a fire department mutual aid program within the county that provides assistance when calls overlap. For instance, the Mid Valley Fire Department will respond when Heald's department is already on a call, but he said that doesn't always solve the problem.

Problems aside, the Carmel Valley fire chief said he goes to work every day because he likes helping people.

Heald remembers the time when his firefighters were part of the strike team in the 1985 Lexington Reservoir fire. The reservoir is off of Highway 17 between San Jose and Santa Cruz, and each morning the men were on the fire line, and each night they returned exhausted to a city park to eat and sleep.

On their walk to the park, the community would line the road, waving and shouting encouragement, "We love you."

"I can't think of another situation where you help people, who are always happy to have you there," said Heald.

Seniors program needs participants

In September 1987 the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department began a program to benefit senior citizens of the community in two ways.

First, senior citizens who live alone and are often "shut-in" their residences with little or no contact with friends or relatives, can be provided with the security of knowing that someone does truly care about their welfare. Also, those concerned with their physical well-being will have someone to check on them daily.

Second, seniors interested in participating in some type of community program will be able to work with those in their own peer group by volunteering to place these daily telephone calls to the recipients of the program.

Currently, the department has a full staff of volunteers, however, anyone wishing to be placed on an alternate list to fill in when another caller is unable to make it or is away on vacation, is encouraged to call for information.

Anyone living alone, whether concerned about their health or not, and all those seniors wishing to make new friends or just have the opportunity to talk with someone new each day is encouraged to participate in this program.

Telephone calls are made daily by a volunteer beginning at 9:30 a.m. No participant is ever restricted to their home; they need only contact the police department in advance if they plan to be away during the time the calls are placed to avoid any confusion. If someone fails to answer their telephone, a patrol unit is sent by to conduct a welfare check at the residence.

In addition to these daily telephone "visitations," social events are also planned periodically as well as home visitations upon request.

Anyone interested in becoming a part of this program should contact Desk Officer Cathy Dampier at Carmel Police Department, 624-6403.

A First-rate festival

WHAT IS it like for a playwright to see his creation produced for the first time? Frawley Becker, author of 411 Joseph, this year's winner in Carmel's Festival of Firsts, told director Peter DeBono that he hadn't known what to expect.

He came from his home in West Hollywood to watch a run-through of his play a week before it opened, and began to feel confident about the outcome. Returning for the final night of the play's three-night run, he saw a production that had much of the intensity of an opening night. He told DeBono that he was "very pleased" and went home with some very special memories.

I credit Peter DeBono for bringing this charming play to life. But he laughs and reminds me that someone has said a successful play is "80 percent in the casting." He did have a hand-picked, sterling cast: the Dick family (Rollie, Jeanne and Joshua), Teresa Del Piero, Jack Whittaker, Ivy Cates, Patrick McEvoy, Brian Huntington and Jon Karachale. Director and cast, together with set designer Ramie Wikdahl, and the rest of a fine staff came together to produce a new play that fully deserved its first place award and a full-scale productions.

WHICH IS not to neglect the four runner-up plays, which were given staged readings on the two weekends before 411 Joseph was presented. Among the best of the many plays honored over the years in this typically "Carmel" festival, they attracted larger audiences than ever before. The audiences were rewarded by four different and individually interesting works, presented by some of this area's finest actors. I could fill up the column with their names, but instead, let me just urge you not to miss any of the Festival of First performances next year!

SHE WANTED to provide "a human connection." So Carmel's Michael Adrian started a new service: morning wake-up calls. "It's just like the service you can get in hotels," she explained. "I call my clients at whatever hour they want and give them a cheerful 'Good morning, it's time to start the day!' Sometimes they ask me to call them back in a few minutes. "So far, all her clients—both men and women—are cheerful when she calls. "They wake right up!"

Michele sees her service as an antidote to non-responsive machines. A former answering service operator, now a travel agent, she already has signed up 10 clients. And who awakens Michele? "Oh, I'm up early anyway," she told me. "My earliest client call is 5:30, and I wake up before that." In a couple of hours she has finished her calls for the day and can start her own more usual business day. With a headstart.

SPLENDID SENIOR

One of Florence Larsen's earliest memories is going into the Pasadena Playhouse with her father when the famous theater was being constructed. "I remember that special feeling of theater," Floss told me. "Big spaces...the stage."

From that time until now, Florence Larsen's life has been filled with a great many different things: shcool, college, jobs in different cities, marriage, children, home designing and building, volunteerism (12 years with the auxiliary at CHOMP, where she helped plan and implement the snack bar). And always – acting. "One of my problems is that I have spread myself too thin, had too many interests. I haven't concentrated enough to be really good at any one thing." But local theatergoers would argue that.

Floss was born in Pasadena, where her father was an attorney, a man whose real love was the theater. Her parents worked with Gilmore Brown, founder of the Pasadena Community Playhouse and Floss and her sister grew up in the atmosphere of theater. They went to see their father in plays and were themselves in "little plays" as children. Floss acted from the time she was about 6, and always found it fun. The depression that followed the stock market crash in 1929 was an ill wind that blew some good for her father; he gave up his law practice in a failing business climate and got himself a job – acting in movies. For the last 18 years of his life he did what he had always wanted to do.

Meanwhile, Floss continued acting in a girls' school in southern California and then at Stanford. But during her college years her emphasis changed from acting to the technical side of theater and especially to costuming. "It was a retreat of sorts," Floss said. "I found a big co-ed college somewhat frightening so I immersed myself in the world of costumes. And I wrote – mostly poetry."

She looks back on the time of World War II as a very unsettling time for herself and all of her generation. She had been a camper in the Del Monte Forest at the Douglas Camp, forerunner of Robert Louis Stevenson School – and became a counselor, helping Dick Collins teach horseback riding, then exercising polo ponies, another of the many activities Florence Larsen describes as "great fun." She visited her mother in New Hampshire and became active in a "barn theater" there, going with other actors to New York in the winter and going to a theater school where she says, "I learned a lot in a few months." Diction every day; dialects (much earlier, she and her father had tried out their dialects on each other); body movement; exercises according to the Stanislavsky method. One of the many jobs she held during this period was a "first" – she was one of the first women hired (by North America) as a draftsperson. You guessed it: she found that fascinating too.

Back and forth between Pasadena, New York, New Hampshire and the Monterey Peninsula, Floss was perhaps happiest here. "I always loved it. I bought a bicycle and rode all over. We took pack trips from Douglas Camp – all the way to the San Clemente Dam, and on a loop to Big Sur." After marrying, and living with her husband and their growing family in Southern California, she finally realized a long-held dream when they came to live on our peninsula.

Finding a special lot in Pebble Beach in 1951, she and her husband designed a home. While her children (Anne and Peter) were young, Florence Larsen concentrated on being home for them. Then when Anne was about 8 (in early 1960s), she did her first play here. It was The Miracle Worker, with Roz Goodrich, directed by Nick Zanides. It was to be the first of more than 50 plays in which she has appeared-always to the delight of local audiences. When I caught up with her for this interview, we had to find time between rehearsals for Deathtrap, in which she will appear later this month, at MPC. Still acting, and still enjoying it, she told me that she plans to continue "until I drop."

She has many happy memories, and some amusing ones. She recalls this during Little Foxes, which begins with a scene featuring three actors: just three minutes before curtain time there was a phone call; one of those three was not coming. In just moments, Floss and her fellow actor had to figure who would say what to get the missing actress' lines in, and keep going. They did it! There was another time when a bottle of champagne, heated by the stage lights, blew its top prematurely, right next to where she was standing. Floss couldn't help reacting with a start, but of course she went on.

Learning lines isn't hard for this actress; her father gave her some ways to make it easier. But she still dislikes it. Forgetting lines is her only real fear when she is on stage. "I have asked myself why we get so nervous about that," she told me, "but I haven't figured it out. We aren't automatons, so why do we get so upset?"

What is it about the theater that holds this splendid senior? In her own words: "I've always loved writing – creating. In the theater it is fun to create a believable person from words on a page." Reflecting, she added: "And it's such a team effort, including the audience. The interdependence creates a complete circle."

Then, too, she loves to make people laugh, describing herself as having been the class clown even in grammer school and high school. Perhaps to cover up some insecurities, she suggests.

This graceful, ladylike person said: "I've kind of specialized in dingbats. All different, but still – dingbats." That would be hard for me to imagine if I hadn't seen it for myself, on more than one local stage. Whether it's dingbats or charming British ladies she plays, we can be very glad that she did concentrate on acting, along with her many other interests and talents. "Break a leg," Floss!

Bring own water to Molera Park

Drinking or potable water is no longer available in the Andrew Molera State Park, located on the Big Sur Coast.

In the past, potable water was provided by "water buffalos." The old military metal water tanks on wheels no longer meet state health standards for drinking water and have been removed from the park.

Campers and day users should plan on bringing their own drinking water. Drinking water is available at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park and Julia Pfeiffer Burns State Park.

For further information, contact the Big Sur District Office at 667-2315.

Use toll-free line for reservations

There is a toll-free telephone number for making reservations at California State Parks through the MISTIX reservation system – 1-800-444-7275.

Reservations from out-of-state callers will still be made through the toll number of 1-619-452-1950.

The toll-free number is not only for state park camping reservations, but also for Hearst Castle tours.

A MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF PEBBLE BEACH:

"...You can see the breakers
leaping high and white by day:
At night the outline of the shore is traced in the transparent silver of the moonlight and the flying foam; and from all around,
even in quiet weather, the low distant thrilling roar of the Pacific hangs over the coast..."

—— ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

If you love Pebble Beach's natural beauty and tranquility, then show it by voting NO on Measure M November 6

Friends, things are getting real serious. The critical vote whether or not to turn the Pebble Beach Forest away from its legendary, pristine, rural state into a sprawling, bustling city (can you believe it?) is close at hand.

If he had known early on where things might be headed Fra Serra would have turned in his brown cassock and sailed back to Majorca. And Mary Austin, dear soul, would have moved closer to her little Carmel fireplace, lamenting the good old days. For a yuppified, black-topped mini metropolis in the Forest is not what they and other Peninsula pioneers had in mind at all! Replace that wonderful scent of wood smoke, pine needles, and sea mist with the smell of engine exhaust? Sand dunes with concrete? Come on.

Well, despite the protestations and reassurances of the pro-city advocates that they will not let "urbanization" happen to the rest of us, we are of the opinion that it's just going to happen, with or in spite of them. Why? Because that's just the way Peninsula cities go.

Think about it. Five new councilmen meet, squabble, connive and divide. Citizens gather, protest, and mutter recall. Slick staffers move in, multiply, file wage demands, and sue. A mult-million dollar city hall complex appears. Acres of paved, striped parking. Flowered patios and courtyards. A snack bar. Service garages. A Communications Center. Then a second fire station. Prickly activist groups circle and threaten. Sun-glassed, shot-gunned policemen in ominous "black and whites" lie in wait in the oaks to pounce on you and me. Land Use Plan preparation erupts and drags on for years in furious contention and costly litigation. Lawyers smile. Zoning battles seem endless, fighting street by street. Only insiders get building permits. City and Company go head to head. The gates and tolls lose in the Court. The Company moves to transfer the roads to the City. Carmel seals off San Antonio at Second Street. New income is needed as the city spends itself out. From where? Fees? Not enough. Our fellow Peninsula cities usually authorize new hotels, convention centers, and shopping malls for tax income. Why should our Council, desparate for cash, be any different?

Not a pretty picture. Is it a reasonable scenario? Can we prove it? Of course not. But we do believe it is both reasonable and foreseeable. If you want verification, just look around you at our sister cities on the Bay. Talk with them.

But listen. If you need your version of "home rule" and six-inch water pipes so bad that you're willing to live forever with the above sort of civic mess, then go ahead, vote yes on M (for Mess) and God love you.

As for us, we favor staying with what we have in hand here and now. The new city's Pandora's Box is much too big and much too dark for us.

Vote No on M.

The eyes have it

TOM FIELD, former manager of Perspectacles, is back in Carmel and the proud owner of Precision Optics in Del Dono Court at Dolores and Fifth.

A practicing optician on the peninsula for the past 15 years, Field says, "I've just about served everyone who has worn glasses in the area."

Geared toward locals, Precision Optics offers clients complete eye-care service from start to finish, says Field.

That means from the customers' initial selection of frames and prescription cutting to continued frame maintainence.

"It's a personal service," says Field.

New to you... That would be the Best of the West, located in The Barnyard.

SPCA needs towels, linens

A plea to the general public is being made by the SPCA of Monterey County for clean towels, sheets, blankets and pillowcases for use in the animal shelter and wildlife center.

Blankets are used as comforters for the many puppies who are brought to the shelter because no one wants them. Prior to their being adopted, the shelter staff tries to make them as comfortable as possible and using blankets helps.

The greatest demand is for clean towels both in the shelter and in the wildlife center.

Donated items can be delivered to the SPCA animal shelter, 1002 Monterey-Salinas Highway 68 (across from Laguna Seca Recreation Area) any day of the week between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. If the donor has a significant quantity and cannot deliver them to the shelter, arrangements can be made to pick them up.

Coastal Commission to offer input on Monterey Bay Sanctuary

By DAVID LELAND

STATE COASTAL Commissioners will offer input regarding the proposed Monterey Bay Sanctuary beginning at 9 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 10, at the Monterey Conference Center.

The Coastal Commission is one of several public agencies reviewing the Draft Environmental Impact Statement/Management Plan, prepared by The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) regarding the proposed sanctuary.

"The Coastal Commission is a key player in that the commission will eventually have to determine that the final sanctuary is 'consistent' with California's coastal management program," said Dan Haifely, Save Our Shores project coordinator.

About 2,200 square nautical miles are being recommended by NOAA for the proposed sanctuary, which would promote resource protection, research, education and visitor use for the Monterey Bay and its underwater canyon.

If adopted, the Monterey Bay Sanctuary would become the largest of the nine sanctuaries located in the United States, according to NOAA.

The draft document played to packed houses during public hearings held last month in Monterey, Santa Cruz and Half Moon Bay.

In a Coastal Commission staff report, planners recommend that commissioners disagree with NOAA's boundary proposal and expand the area to 3,800 square nautical miles.

In the north, the boundary should extend considerably past the proposed Pescadero Point, extending up to the Gulf of the Farallones National Marine Sanctuary, according to the staff.

Only then, the report said, can the sanctuary be assured the proposed oil lease sales will not affect the marine wildlife.

In the south, the Coastal Commission staff is recomending that the boundary extend to the San Luis Obispo County line, which would guarantee protection at the Sea Otter Game Refuge.

The current southern boundary ends at Partington Point.

The staff report also recommends that a buffer zone be established between the Monterey Bay Sanctuary and the Gulf of the Farallones National Marine Sanctuary.

The staff report concludes that the sanctuary "will form a prototype model for the nation's...marine ecosystem management, research and education."

Public comment at the meeting will be taken at the Coastal Commission chairman's discretion.

Big Sur Land Trust Complete 184-acre Conservative transaction

THE BIG Sur Land Trust Oct. 1, completed a long-term conservation transaction by transferring 184 acres to the Monterey Peninsula Park District.

Located along Turner Creek and lying adjacent to the Los Padres National Forest, this acreage will be added to the 1,157-acre Mill Creek Preserve owned and managed by the park district.

Purchased in 1985 from Blythe Bower, this land will be used for limited day-use recreation according to the management plan recently completed by the park district and the Mill Creek Citizen's Advisory Committee. The Mill Creek Preserve will be open for public use after the district has obtained a special use permit from Monterey County.

Public use of this land had been opposed unsuccessfully by the Canyon's Neighborhood Association who have now lost three times in court, most recently, on Sept. 13, with the California Supreme Court refusing to hear the association's case.

The conveyance is the 50th conservation transaciton completed by the Big Sur Land Trust since its founding in 1978. A total of 8,200 acres of coastal land in Monterey County have now been preserved by the trust. With offices in Carmel, the trust is a tax-exempt, non-profit corporation with a supportive membership of 600 people.

FIRST NAME PSYCHOLOGY

First names are not merely inherited. They are given us as the result of a deliberate choice by parents or guardians. While we may not have much to say in the matter at the time they are bestowed, we have a good deal to say in determining the extent to which they are used in after years. If you have a "first name personality," the qualities that make men instinctively call you "Joe" or "Jim" or "Dick" instead of Mr. Brown or Senator Smith, it will not necessarily be because you consciously encourage the familiarity but because of something in your bearing that inspires friendliness.

Just as Roosevelt was "Teddy" or "T.R." to everyone, so was Stevenson "R.L.S." – not merly because Stevenson was a prolific writer but because of a the great human appeal of his work. Lincoln was "Abe" not merely because he could tell good stories, but also because of his prevailing passion for justice and liberty.

You can assume the bluff, hearty manner, but if there is no real friendship behind it someone is sure to penetrate the camouflage and expose the stiff-necked personality behind it. Such a disguise is easily penetrated – by one's family, employees, neighbors, even the casual acquaintance can discern the real personality behind a mask. But if your mind is open, your spirit tolerant, your manner gracious, people will use your first name – or even some diminutive of it – just as unconsciously as you, in turn, express your freindship in general.

DRIVING TO FIT OUR STREETS

Having just visited the scene of a traffic accident in our village, we are constrained to remark that "something ought to be done" about our traffic conditions here. For they are not good.

They are not good because we have streets adapted to the leisurely life of our citizens and visitors persist in driving over them hell-bent for election – as though they were great boulevards of the sort of metropolis that we don't want to be.

This means danger, to motorists, to pedestrains, to children who, whether they should do so or not, sometimes play in our streets. We'd hate to see a life snuffed out because on thoroughfares when the visibility at intersections call for a 15-mile speed, people persist in driving two or three times that fast.

We don't want to advocate the cutting back of shrubbery which makes visibility low. We think a far better solution of this problem would be volumtary – or enforced-holding down of driving speed to a rate in keeping with the roads over which our cars must travel. But we ought to do something.

If we want to drive like Los Angeles people, we should adapt our streets to the Los Angeles way of driving. The alternative would seem to be to drive like Carmel people, at a speed which Carmel streets require.

Our Gallant Mayor Rescues Tourists Lost Among Trees

Nineteen trees, also tourists caught in a traffic jam, claimed the attention of the city council Tuesday afternoon on its monthly tree tour meeting. The unexpected traffic jam occurred at one of the most unlikely intersections in town, Torres and Tenth.

The council arrived at this location after denying Albert E. Lingert permission to cut down what he considered a hazardous 90-foot pine in front of his property on First Street. However, the council decided to allow the crown of this giant to be trimmed to lessen possibility of its being blown down in a storm.

As councilmen, city officials and the press converged in cars at Torres and Tenth, a car from Michigan carrying three young ladies drove up the steep Torres hill and found no place to go...just trees, cars and councilmen.

Mayor Herbert Blanks went to the rescue and gallantly explained to the young ladies that they were not heading for Highway One as they thought and indicated the right direction. But parked cars crowded the one exit route. Council consideration of a city tree with an advanced case of heart rot was interupted by squealing brakes as the driver of the Michigan car attempted to weave her way out without slipping backwards down the hill into another car.

The mayor went the the rescue again, extricated the young ladies' car and then found that the car behind them was occupied by lost California tourists. The Mayor headed them in the right direction, too, and the council got back to silviculture, in particular the 60-feet tree which Mrs. Egbert Schenck wished removed. The council decided that a bore test should be made to find out how badly fungus had invaded the heartwood of the tree, which although in its declining years might well grace the Eighty Acres for some years to come without endangering Mrs. Schenck's home during storms.

CARMEL AIDS STUDENT WON'T BE ATTENDING RIVER SCHOOL

A young boy with the fatal disease AIDS will not be allowed to attend River School, the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education unanimously decided Sept. 27.

Following two meetings with parents at River and Tularcitos schools last week, the board met in a closed session last Friday to discuss admittance of the boy.

Trustees' concerns are multi-fold. They want to give the boy what is called peer group experiences, but then another child who may be ill is a potential danger to the AIDS patient because the disease eliminates all normal body defense systems against illnesses.

There also is concern that the insistence that AIDS cannot be transmitted through casual contact is still not a guarantee.

Eastwood appeal

from Carmel Valley to Jacks Peak Park.

THE PROJECT has been in the making for more than six years, since Clint Eastwood, his former wife Maggie and James Garner deeded the land, valued at at least $2.7 million, to Monterey County specifically for senior housing.

Eastwood and Garner also gave a cash gift to save Jacks Peak Park, which Pacific Meadows abuts, several years ago.

Pacific Meadows is the largest undertaking to fall under the guidelines of the Carmel Valley Master Plan since it was adopted in 1986.

In April of 1989, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors unanimously agreed that the need for senior housing in the area outweighed potential adverse environmental impacts from the project.

During public hearings, Carmel Valley attorney Richard Rosenthal cited problems in increased traffic on Carmel Valley Road, and diminished viewshed and water.

In 1988, the board allocated 30 acre feet of water a year for the project.

While the project will be under direct management of Carmel Senior Housing, Inc., Pacific Meadows has a landlord in the Monterey County Housing Authority, which rents the acreage to the group for about $100 annually.

Del Mesa Carmel also licensed Pacific Meadows a portion of its land for sewer and water.

Price of gasoline goes up even more in September

THE AVERAGE price of a gallon of regular unleaded self-serve gasoline is $1.372, according to the September monthly survey of the California State Automobile Association (CSAA).

The auto club's survey of 600 gasoline retailers in northern and central California and Nevada shows a 6-cent-per-gallon increase in this most popular grade over the last month.

Often in past years, September saw a drop in retail gas prices with the end of summer travel demand. In 1989, for instance, the CSAA survey shows a drop of 6.7 cents in the price of regular unleaded self-serve gasoline, averaging $1.084 in September of that year.

This year, it seems concerns about the Middle East situation have outweighed the decreased demand as a price factor.

To help motorists cope with the continued price increase, CSAA suggests making 5 gallons do the work of 6 by taking simple conservation measures. Three areas of conservation would be trip planning (such as combining errands, car pooling, taking public transit), good driving techniques (such as maintaining steady speeds and avoiding idling) and car maintenance (such as keeping ignition parts in good condition and properly inflating tires).

More detailed consumer gas saving tips can be found in the 9-page AAA "Gas Watcher's Guide," available at CSAA offices, free of charge, while supplies last.

The gas price survey is conducted for CSAA by the Computer Petroleum. The monthly survey prices are averages. CSAA advises motorists to "window shop" before they have to fill up; price differences of up to 45 cents per gallon have been found between different stations.

CSAA, serving more than 3 million members in northern and central California and the state of Nevada, is affiliated with the American Automobile Association (AAA).

School district still seeking relief from blows to its budget

By DAVID LELAND

WHILE IT has been said that the passage of time heals all wounds, CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise has yet to find a salve for what he believes to be a critical financial blow to the district.

In fact, Infelise still fumes almost a month after the state Legislature adopted a bill penned by state Sen. Ken Maddy, allowing counties to bill school and special districts for collection and distribution of property taxes.

"You will rape the Carmel Unified School District of approximately $184,000," said Infelise in a letter to Maddy. "This will create a deficit that if carried through next year, and will force us to decimate our educational program."

CUSD Board of Trustees President Gary Gray said that the district may suffer more than others because most of its income, 76 percent, is generated from property taxes. Conversely, the Pacific Grove Unified School District only relies on property taxes for 56 percent of its budget, he said.

As possible consequences of the loss of funding, Gray cited increased class size, personnel layoffs, elimination of educational programs, inability to meet capital outlay programs and curtailment of maintenance grounds and transportation services.

The bill does not become law until Jan. 1. Until that time, activist groups statewide are working at ways to ward off possible negative affects of the measure.

One such group is Sacramento-based Association for California School Administrators (ACSA), a private 15,000-member organization composed of principals, administrators and district office workers.

"Our educational coalition is in the process of exploring a lawsuit," said Tom DeLapp, director of communications, adding that a decision will be made sometime this fall. "We really are concerned that counties are hurting."

But DeLapp said his organzation is waiting until after the Nov. 8 general election to actively pursue litigation.

Both gubernatorial candidates appear to be more sympathetic toward schools than outgoing Gov. George Deukmejian, DeLapp said.

With that in mind, DeLapp said that it is possible for the new governor to repeal the unpopular law before it takes effect in January.

"They could reach an agreement," he said. "We're urging our members not to do anything right now."

MEANWHILE, CARMEL Valley resident and local attorney Mike Stamp has taken an interest in the new law.

"They (Legislature) did this in the middle of the night with the doors closed," said Stamp, who is also considering filing a lawsuit. "It's pretty clearly a stupid law."

Stamp is one of many observers who cringe at the way the public process was manipulated by state legislators to get them off the hook during budget hearings last August.

For example, in order to adopt the new law allowing the county to levy administration fees, lawmakers repealed an existing law saying that such an action was illegal.

Indeed, a 1977 law read that "No assessor...shall charge or receive any fees or compensation for assessing, collecting, receiving, keeping or disbursing any school moneys."

Stamp said that normally legislators would repeal the previous law and adopt new measure with ample fanfare and opportuinity for public comment.

County Assessor Jack Skillicorn told The Pine Cone that he is aware of the roughshod tactics demonstrated in Sacramento.

"The consensus around the state from county counsels is that (the previous law) was overridden," he said. "They (legislators) do that all the time."

Skillicorn, who under the law is given the duty of computing taxes against the schools, said that assessors from statewide are currently meeting to fine-tune the measure.

Design a 'sculptural vehicle'

Imagine a field of multi-colored sculpture. Combine that with the festive pageantry of a soap box derby and the surrealism of an artists' Concours d' Elegance and you have the basic elements of the First Art Day Kinetic Soap Box Derby.

Art Day festival – a day-long array of programs, demonstrations and events focusing on the arts – encourages local artists to design moving sculpture for the Kinetic Soap Box Derby, set Saturday, Oct. 20 at Monterey Peninsula College.

Participants in the race/exhibit are invited to design sculptural vehicles which will be raced down a gentle incline, with winning works selected on artistic merit as well as speed.

Entries must be manned by the artist and cannot be motorized. Artwork must be able to roll and include at least minimum steering characteristics.

Awards will be given for the fastest sculpture. Artistic winners wil be displayed in a local gallery following the contest.

Monterey County Artist's Day will include a workshop on health and safety in the arts media by Monona Rossol; a lecture and slide presentation by Jim Schietinger, videos, discussions, displays and a reception.

Entry for the Kinetic Sculpture Race is $20 and includes all of the day's events and the reception. Registration must be received by Monday, Oct. 8. Late registration is $25 at the door.

For more information abut the Kinetic Sculpture Race, call 624-7491. For information regarding Artday events, call 375-2208.

Artists invited to join fair

The Monterey/Santa Cruz County Gallery Association is now calling for artists who wish to participate in the 1990 Carmel Art Festival, set Oct. 13-14 at the Mission Ranch Cottages, Carmel.

Activities will include an outdoor arts and crafts fair featuring more than 40 arts and crafts booths, an indoor painting and sculpture exhibit, lanscape painting contest, entertainment, plus wine and food sales. For more information, send S.A.S.E. to M.S.C.C.G.A., Box 7884, Santa Cruz, CA 95061, or call 625-0351.

Jazz Festival posters shown

"All That Jazz," an exhibition of Monterey Jazz Festival posters, can be viewed at the Monterey Airport Gallery in celebration of the 33rd birthday of the world-famous jazz festival.

The show, assembled from posters in local private collections, features the work of artists and designers who each year have interpreted and heralded the event in their own way.

Among these are Earl Newman's 1974 silk-screened saxophone player, Eldon Dedini's 1964 "Dizzy for President" poster, and Batista Moon Studios' color photo posters for 1980, 1982 and '84.

The show is presented by the Art-at-the-Airport program in cooperation with Colton Hall Museum, the Monterey City Cultural Arts Commission and the Monterey Jazz Festival. The show continues through Oct. 28. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.

"All the figures that have been bandied about are rough computations," he said, adding that the almost-$184,000 estimated for CUSD is fairly accurate.

Stamp said the bill overcharges districts for the amount of work it takes to compute the property assessment.

"The amount they bill you has nothing to do with the amount of labor they do," he said. "It does not cost county assessors $183,000 a year to assess the district."

There is, however a provision in the bill that allows districts to contract with a third party to assess the district.

Under that method, property owners would receive two tax bills – one from the county and one from CUSD – the amount of CUSD administration costs would be sent to the county.

Vance Baldwin, CUSD assistant superintendent, said the district is currently putting its energies into the litigating the matter.

He did not, however, rule out the possibility of hiring a less-expensive administrator to assess the district.

"That would be a creative approach that would take some work," he said. "Right now that is an idea; it's a possibility."

Voter registration deadline approaches

THE CONSOLIDATED General Election will be held on Tuesday Nov. 6, 1990. The polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. The deadline to register to vote in this election is Tuesday Oct. 9.

Voters may register at the Election Department located at 201 Main St. in Salinas or registration forms may be picked up at many public locations throughout Monterey County. Forms are available at post offices, city halls and public libraries.

Citizens may also call the Election Department at 647-7621 and registration forms will be mailed. Forms must be completed no later than Oct. 9, in order to vote on Nov. 6.

To be eligible to register to vote, a person must be a citizen of the United States, a resident of California, at least 18 years of age on the date of the next election, and not be in prison or on parole for the conviction of a felony. You must re-register whenever you move, change your name or wish to change your political party affiliation.

Many important issues will appear on the November ballot. Offices and measures on the November ballot include all state constitutional officers, members of the state legislature as well as 28 state ballot measures.

Run-off election for county officials including third district county supervisor, sheriff and superintendent of schools will be on the November ballot. Elections will be held in 8 Monterey County cities on Nov. 6, including Gonzales, Greenfield, King City, Marina, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Seaside and Soledad.

In addition to the regular elections in the Moss Landing Harbor District and the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District there will be special elections in the Paso Robles Joint Union High School District, the Pebble Beach Community Services District and the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District. Persons with questions may call the Election Department.

Toll-free number available for voter registrations

ONCE AGAIN the California Secretary of State's Office is offering citizens a chance to call toll-free from anywhere within California to request voter registration forms.

Persons who need to register to vote may call 1-800-345-VOTE and a voter registration form will be mailed to them. This year the Secretary of State is also offering a registration line in Spanish. Spanish speaking citizens may call 1-800-345-8682 to receive a registration form.

To be eligible to register to vote, a person must be a citizen of the United States, a resident of California, not in prison or on parole for the conviction of a felony and be at least 18 years of age on the date of the next election. Persons meeting the other eligibility requirements who will be 18 on or before Nov. 6, 1990 may register to vote now.

The registration deadline for the Nov. 6, 1990 General Election is Tuesday, Oct. 9.

Watcha' got cookin'?

THE SECOND annual Taste of Carmel, held recently at The Highlands Inn and billed as "A Night of Magic," featured mimes, a juggler and a magician.

Did you ever ask a mime his name? A quick mental inventory of his repertoire crosses his pancaked face as he decides on the necessary theatrics. He runs down his mental menu: engage in a quick round of charades, spell it out with white-gloved fingers, defer to a nearby juggler who talks, turn and mumble a name to the columnist or then spell it out on a notepad and chance that she can read the gloved handwriting.

What more can we say? Mimes Robert Colter and Robert Basgall wordlessly welcomed guests to the Highlands Inn with an unobtrusive twist on the usual greeting and, later, Basgall delighted young Andrew Armanasco with a "name that card" game in a universal language of expression and fun that both clearly understood.

Magic may have been the theme, but the taste treats were the stars.

Oysters on the half-shell, barbecued spareribs, grilled marinated rock shrimp, crab cakes, salmon cakes, roasted eggplant with roasted peppers, ravioli and tortellini, pate, lots of salmon and smoked duck enticed roving tasters.

Even the restaurateur/chefs got into it, enjoying morsels from each other's tables. Francoise De Poorter from Casa Bella delicately served pate with continental flair but thought the finger-lickin' spare ribs from Toots Lagoon were the most exotic. She claimed there's nothing to compare them to in France.

Daniel Alioti, new owner of L'Escargot, presided over platters of salmon and at the same time raved about the antispasto served by Didier Dutertre, chef de cuisine at Casanova. Antipasto at Casanova is a vegetarian's dream. Billed as northern Italian and southern French, it's organic, no cholesterol added.

Host Chef Brian Whitmer of the Highlands Inn, assisted by the California Market's Karen Estuey, dished up three varieties of mouth-watering cakes: crab, salmon and mushroom/corn.

The decorations could be described as contempo-magic; moonbeams and twinkling stars. Speculation on a theme for next year prompted a '90s response. "Recycle those stars for a Hollywood theme. Or better yet, how about a Hawaiian motif? All those bunsen burners at full flame make for a steamy setting." Aloha shirts optional.

Genie Houdini, third generation sleight of hand artist, mingled with the crowd, pulling tricks out of her deep pockets for one-on-one prestidigitation. Favorites were the crazy man's handcuffs, and families of bunnies that appeared out of thin air.

Ventana chef Peter Anthony Charles didn't have much room to work, but his grilled, marinated rock shrimp, served over spinach panne pasta sizzled with flavor.

Anything goes at a tasting. Chef Orlan Marcus of The Beach & Tennis Club went all out and created a new dish for the event. Mistaken for dessert, Marcus' pineapple pinwheels were a gastronomic reward for those bold enough to sample.

"I get a lot of questions about them," Orlan explained. "I want to show the creativity of the Pebble Beach chefs. John Romana, my assistant, and I spent the last 24 hours preparing for tonight."

Preparing what? Smoked duck, marinated in cognac, cured in green tea, and dressed with dehydrated cherry and pineapple came together in a four-star dish worthy of the Pebble Beach Resorts.

Beach Club members, watch for Orlan's pinwheels, they're scheduled for a holiday debut. But don't expect to see this dish in the recipe column in Nautilus, The Beach Club newsletter, it would take a book to tell the whole story.

Carmel artist Bill Bates captured the essence of at least 60 willing subjects. Watch for Bates' originals appearing on office and reception area walls around town.

Sole mousseline was on the menu at the La Playa table, but Executive Chef Bryan Carr and Pastry Chef Pamela Baumgart had time on their hands. Their dish was so popular that they ran out halfway through the evening.

Also firing up their bunsen burners, were Anton & Michel, Creme Carmel, Diana's, Flaherty's Guiliano's, The Pine Inn, Silver Jones and Ventana.

Wines were donated by Ventana Vineyards.

David Armanasco warmed up his auction audience with a grand entrance as The Phantom of the Opera, a popular theme this season, and then cajoled, enticed and embarrassed bidders into raising their hands.

"You gotta believe," he implored in a TV-preacher's call to arms, and hands went up. Joyce Underdown opted for the Presidential Treatment at Highlands Inn; two nights in the Presidential Suite. Ted Leidig was high man for the week-long Hawaiian Holiday. Master of ceremonies Armanasco "put his money where his mouth is" when he was the low and only bidder on the two night stay at La Playa Hotel's Cottages. Karen Hunter's business development package went to Judy Jordan of Koala Blue.

Sounds like fun doesn't it? It was also a sell-out. Chairperson LuAnn Sullivan-Meador and her hard-working staff crunched the numbers and report that the event made $17,000 for the Carmel Business Assocation, with a portion going to the FOCUS group at Carmel High School.

Case by Case

MOST EVENTS on the social calendar that involve food and wine credit a winery with donating cases and cases. Local wineries are hit up for donations on a regular basis. How do they handle all these requests?

PETERSON CONWAY and Laquita Boulanger of Conway of Asia exercised their option and wore formal attire to the Taste of Carmel event.

Connie Winners, in charge of sales and marketing for Ventana Vineyards explains, "We get more requests for donations every year and there are state and federal regulations on how much wine we can give away. In general, we screen requests on an individual basis and are in the process of developing criteria for eligibility. Where the event is held, who the group is, and the cause are all taken into consideration."

Local wineries ae asked for donations on a daily basis but their generosity is sometimes taken for granted. Do all the donors return the favor with the appropriate thanks?

Fiesta

NORMALLY, TOURISTS visiting the Carmel Mission Basilica wander through the gardens and courtyard imagining what it was like when the mission was the social hub of the early California community.

The 26th Fiesta de San Carlos Borromeo brought the sights and sounds of the Spanish founders back to life with mariachi music and Mexican folk dancing.

More than 60 modern-day peddlers lined the mission cloisters selling holiday gift items, jewelry, and hard-to-find items such as stuffed llamas, earring organizers, and quillows. Quillows? Peter Jennings, take note; there were also large clam shells with an exact likeness of the Lone Cypress painted on them. Ole!

Shalom

MISS THOSE great blintzes and hot pastrami that you left behind in the big city? For a quick cholesterol hit, plan to go to the Jewish Food Festival this coming Sunday, Oct. 7.

Traveler's Advisory

LOS ANGELES seems to us to be the center of disorder. The San Diego Freeway doesn't really go to San Diego, Anaheim is not a suburb and the Los Angeles Rams don't play football in their hometown. Which, when it all runs together, doesn't make much sense.

But, believe it or not, there are some attractions down there that make the effort of sorting it all out worthwhile. With that in mind, here are some tips on what to see after you've seen Mickey Mouse.

Tip One: If you have children and want to cut costs while celebrating Disneyland's birthday, stay at the Pan Pacific (formerly the Emerald of Anaheim). Teenagers packing Macburgers up the elevator are a strong hint that this hotel is ideal for the family. You can walk next door to the Disneyland Hotel's sights and sounds.

Tip Two: Take an adult break and ride Amtrak 33 minutes south to San Juan Capistrano and visit the mission. It's calm relief from the pace of thrill rides and freeways, which can be one in the same. While you're there, check out the adobe tour.

Tip Three: Six miles out of LAX in Redondo Beach is a super getaway hotel called Portofino Inn. Completely redone after the January '88 storm that nearly took it to sea, the Portofino is casual plush and intimate. Rooms are Pacific side or overlooking the yacht harbor. Business travelers will like the rates and two-line telephone for lap-top or fax.

Tip Four: If you must go to Hollywood, stop by the Roosevelt Hotel for the flavor of the early Oscar dinner nights and the wonderful lobby decor. And, there's an original David Hockney in the swimming pool. Then, dine or wine at Yamashiro's up the hill. The view makes everything else a bonus.

Tip Five: So you don't have a horse and you can't stand Westerns. We've got news for you. You're going to love the Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum. It's adjacent to the L.A. Zoo and should be mandatory for everyone to visit. Collections range from original Remington and Russell paintings to (yes) the saga of the Western Movie.

ARTIST JOHNNY Apodaca and Charlene Mitchell of Pacific Grove are preparing for Johnny's Oct. 5 art opening at Portofino Cafe in PG. The show, titled "Brush with Nature," features three plein-air artists, Johnny, Cheryl Trotter and Lou Ebert.

Varsity Football

The Carmel High Padres remain undefeated after four games with their win over Alisal High (34-12) last Saturday (9/28).

Mark Fanderl had an excellent game both offensively as a running back and defensively as a strong safety. Mario Bertolucci continued his fine play at quarterback by completing 10 passes in 13 attempts for 144 yards. Tony Spagna picked up an Alisal punt blocked by teammate Mike Herro and ran for a touchdown in one the most exciting plays of the game.

Great blocking in the line was displayed by Dominic Petrocelli, Chris Cannon, Jon Shoemaker, Forest Aldrich, and Sean McDonald. The Padres celebrated their first home league victory in 3-1/2 years with an after-game shower for head coach Craig Johnston and his assistantss Mike Kelley, Mark Spindler, Bill Swift, and Matteo Macaluso.

The Padres visit Robert Louis Stevenson in Pebble Beach on Saturday (10/6) with game times at 11:45 a.m. (JV) and 2 p.m. (V).

Junior Varsity Football

The Carmel JV football squad won a good game over Alisal (12-0) behind a 43-yard punt return touchdown by Donovan McComb and a Matt Travaille pass to Kyle Koontz who scrambled 30 yards for a score. Travaille completed six of eight passes on the day. Lance Thompson had a good game also as offensive and defensive tackle. Defensively, Brian Odello was excellent in his first start as a linebacker, and Cho Prasert played outstanding as both a guard and linebacker. Alisal passes were intercepted by Matt Murphy and Eric Eyerman.

Freshman Football

The CHS frosh lost to powerful Alisal team (42-0). The smaller squad of inexperienced players is improving each week as they look for their first victory. The offense did well in the first half but tired during the second as most are required to play offense and defense. The coaches praised Ryan Gilman and Sam Melton for outstanding play in both directions.

Other bright spots for Carmel were Josh Butte, Kash Kehl, and Matt Goldman. The team also wished to thank Cal and Toni Jepson for the team barbecue.

Since Stevenson School has no frosh team, the Padres will host Hollister today (10/4) at 3:45 p.m. at Carmel's Bardarson Field. Admission for this contest is free.

Water Polo

Carmel's Water Polo team lost its league opener (17-7) against Salinas High on Tuesday (9/5). Bryan Langley led the Padres with three goals, followed by Derek Johnson with two. Forest Melton and Robert Allaire each scored a goal.

Salinas reacted quickly to turnovers and counter-attacked several times so fast as to create some "man-up" scoring situations. The JV team lost to Salinas (16-2) as well.

Later that week CHS placed sixth out of 10 teams in the Watsonville Tournament (9/28) and (9/29) with two wins and three losses. The best Padre game was their loss (12-10) to eventual tournament champs Mountain View High School. Carmel also lost a close game to Watsonville (12-11 in overtime), and lost to Menlo (10-2). The Carmel victories came over Santa Cruz High (9-6) and Reno (9-3). Scores for Carmel for the tournament were Derek Johnson (14), Bryan Langley (12), Mark Roth (7), Robert ALlaire (5), and Forrest Melton (4).

Volleyball

Carmel's volleyball team dropped matches this past week to Notre Dame and consistent league powerhouse King City. Despite slipping to one win and two losses in league play, both the varsity and frosh/soph teams continue to play with enthusiasm and determination. Marni Marasco, Yvonne Leavitt, and and Jodi Miller turned in especially strong performances. The frosh/soph team was led by Bridget Bohnen and Holly Chiappe. Both teams travel to Gonzales (10/2) and Santa Catalina (10/4).

Girl's Tennis

The Carmel tennis team takes an overall 2-4 and a 2-1 league record into its match with Santa Cruz. SYNCHRONIZED SWIMMER NOMINATED FOR TOP ATHLETE AWARD

Cypress Swim Club coaches Donn Squire and Del Neel, who have just returned from the 1990 United States Aquatic Sports (USAS) Convention in Pittsburgh, Pa., had a surprise announcement for one of their swimmers, Heather Pease.

At that convention, the Awards Committee of United States Synchronized Swimming (USSS) unanimously named 14-year-old Heather Pease of Carmel Valley as its 1990 nominee for the Women's Sports Foundation Award for the outstanding "up-and-coming" female athlete in the country.

This award goes to a young female athlete who has placed highly in regional and national competitions and shows great future potential. Pease has been the Regional Solo Champion in both Age Group and Junior Olympic competition since she was 10, has been the National Age Group Champion since she was 12, and the National Junior Olympic Champion since she was 13.

Pease, the youngest synchronized swimmer ever nominated by USSS for this award, has for some time been predicted by her coaches as a future Olympian, and seems to be right on target toward her goal of representing the United States in the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta, Ga.

Becky Dyroen of the Santa Clara Aquamaids, current Junior World Solo Champion, was the 1988 nominee for this award and is pressing the defending U.S. Solo Champion, Kristen Babb of the Walnut Creek Aquanuts, for the Olympic slot in 1992. Pease and her duet partner, Desiree Castro of Carmel, will represent the U.S.A at the International Junior Synchronized Swimming Championship next month in Moscow, U.S.S.R., where both will compete in the solo competition and then pair for the duet championships.

The Cypress Swim Club is urgently in need of financial assistance for funding this costly trip to the Soviet Union for the two swimmers and their coaches, Donn Squire and Del Neel. Tax-deductible contributions may be mailed to the Cypress Swimm Club at Box No.4714, Carmel, CA. 93921.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Becoming true patriots

From Oct. 7, 1982
Carmel Pine Cone

Last week on my return trip from Newfoundland, I changed planes in Toronto, In a conservative newspaper I read an article about a speech made by the new minister of energy, Jean Chretien.

Canadians know a great deal about American politics and politicians, but how many Americans even knew to what party the Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau or Joe Clark, the opposition belong.

The minister, in a long rambling speech said: "Despite negativism, Canada is a fantastic country. However, we ignore the good things about Canada and we have become a nation of complaining 'bitches'." We wonder if these observations could could apply to Canada's neighbor to the south.

Many of us have forgotten that no nation is perfect but that ours is the best there is. Help us, oh Lord, to become true patriots; decrying what is wrong in our system and resolving to do all we c a n t o r i g h t t h e a b u s e .

Help us,oh Lord, to become an active part of the great traditions of our founding fathers. May we never betray their dreams. Help us to be proud of our nation for the right reasons. Give us the patience to overcome our shortcomings. May we never be ashamed to wave the flag and when needed, to wash out its spots. A flag has to be worthy to wave. A good detergent is the wise use of our franchise. Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

At 74 and considered legally blind, Margaret Waldron made holes-in-one two days in a row on the same hole on Amelia Island, Florida golf course, using the same club and battered ball she had found a few days before. Mrs. Waldron took up golfing when she was 43 and kept at it after an eye disorder greatly reduced her vision. She is on the golf course four days a week, usually doing 18 holes in 95 strokes or less. On drives, her husband cues her as to distance and direction. For putting, he stands at the pin and she aims at his white shoes. She retired the holes-in-one ball because it was so "beat up," it wouldn't putt straight.

Wildflowers bloom in place of the usual roadside litter on a stretch of highway one and a half miles long in northwest Louisiana, thanks to a group of senior citizens. They took over responsibility for that highway segment under Louisiana's Adopt-a-Road program. Wearing gloves and using pick-up tools, they cleared away debris ranging from beer cans to furniture parts, and then planted wildflower seeds. The state has placed signs at each end of the highway section crediting their seniors' organization for the "new look."

CRITIC AT LARGE

By Mac McDonald

Et toi!

IF JAMES Brown is the hardest working man in show business, then Terrence Simien is easily the hardest working man in zydeco.

Simien leads one of the hottest zydeco bands in the land, The Mallet Playboys, who were featured in the film and soundtrack of the Dennis Quaid-Ellen Barkin film The Big Easy. Simien and the boys make a rare appearance on the Monterey Peninsula tonight, Thursday, Oct. 4, at Doc Rickett's Lab on Cannery Row, which has supplanted The Club as the club for nationally known live music in the area.

Simien, whose last appearance in Northern California was an exciting and frenzied set at last year's San Francisco Blues Festival, is on his way up, already an established zydeco star, he's on the cusp of crossover success, perhaps even more so than Buckwheat Zydeco, the current darling of the crossover set. But for some strange reason, recordings of Simien have been few and far between: a cut on The Big Easy soundtrack, a cut on a Miller Beer Band Network sampler, and a cut here and there on the relatively obscure Maison de Soul label. He's even said to have recorded a song, You Used to Call Me, that was financed by Paul Simon, who also added background vocals. (Simon was researching zydeco for his Graceland album with the help of Simien.) But that single is hard to come by.

Simien may correct that little oversight with his first full-fledged album, set to be released on Restless Records in mid-October. So until then, you'll just have to show up at one of his shows, which is where you want to be in the first place – I doubt whether any mere recording can capture Simien's powerhouse live shows anyway.

If you do attend the show, keep an eye out for the frottoir (metal washboard) player Earl Sally, he's phenomenal and just as much of a whirling dervish as Simien, who plays the zydeco weapon of choice, the button accordion, with wild abandon.

If you miss the Doc Rickett's show, Simien will be performing at JJ's Cafe in Mountain View and at The Catalyst in Santa Cruz on Saturday, Oct. 6, which may be the best place to catch him, what with the Catalyst's excellent sound system, huge hall and enthusiastic crowds. In fact, enthusiastic may be an understatement compared to the crowds in Monterey, which tend to politely sit on their hands at most live shows.

Upcoming shows you may want to put on your busy social calendar include Mojo Nixon on Oct. 13, and two shows by LA Latino rockers Los Lobos, Oct. 15-16. If you've never seen Los Lobos, you owe it to yourself. They can't even be classified as strictly Latino rockers anymore; they're just as adept at rockabilly, country, norteno, Tex-Mex and zydeco. They put on one of the best live shows around, bar none. Can you imagine, Terrance Simien and Los Lobos toured together a couple of years ago? Their show at the Catalyst during that tour was a barn-burner, with Terrence and the boys joining Los Lobos on stage for a fiery finale.

As long as we're on the subject of zydeco, set aside at least one day for the two-day fourth annual Bay Area Cajun and Zydeco Festival, held Oct. 13 and 14 at Woodminster Aphimtheater in Joaquin Miller Park in the Oakland Hills.

On tap for the festival will be Boozoo Chavis, Dewey Balfa & Friends, John Delafose and the Eunice Playboys (a popular moniker it seems), The Basin Brothers Cajun Band, Danny Poullard & the California Cajun Orchestra, Al Rapone & Zydeco Express, The Sundogs, and Freeze & the New Zydeco Experience. More on this event next week.

Info's at (415) 386-8677. Make a day of it, bring a picnic, the kids, and your dancin' shoes (or feet as the case may be).

Patrons bid on art and more at theater guild benefit

ARTISTIC MEDIUMS ranging from photography to sculpture to oil paintings will be represented at the second annual Carmel Art Auction. This benefit for the Forest Theater Guild is set Wednesday, Oct. 10 at the Lodge in Pebble Beach.

The parameters of this benefit auction have been slightly stretched to accommodate not only original works of art, which make up the majority of the nearly 200 lots, but also such bidworthy goods and services as rare wines, a pleasure cruise, fantasy dinner, interior design consultation and lingerie.

"On a nationwide basis, ticket sales account for approximately half the cost of operating a theater," observed Peter Newman, president of the Forest Theater Guild. "This auction is designed to close the gap."

Last year's auction raised approximately $17,000 for the guild, Newman added. This year, for the second auction, volunteers have worked six months to gather $200,000 in donated artwork, services and other items.

"The emphasis is mostly, but not exclusively, on work by Monterey Peninsula artists," Newman said.

Auctioneer Craig Hemphill will lower the gavel on such works as a hand-painted child's "cow chair" by Crozier Studios; "Fairway – Palm Desert" by Carmel painter Bennett Bradbury; a mixed media collage by Eve Tartar; and a sleeping kitten sculpture by Wah Ming Chang.

Bidders will also see etchings, ceramics, lithographs, block prints, photographs, brass rubbings, antique furniture, watercolors, serigraphs and charcoal paintings.

Interspersed among the art, bidders will also discover an "official Wheel of Fortune hat autographed by Pat Sajak and Vanna White, $2,000 worth of local television airtime, 10 shares of General Motors stock, and opportunities to dine at peninsula restaurants.

The schedule of events on Wednesday, Oct. 10 begins with preview and absentee bidding from 2 to 7 p.m. Admission to the preview is free. Both preview and auction take place in the Conference Center in the Lodge at Pebble Beach.

From 7 to 8:30 p.m. are scheduled a champagne reception, hors d'oeuvres, entertainment and the silent auction. Admission is $35.

The live auction commences at 8:30 p.m. At 9:30 p.m., there will be a raffle for Martin Weekly's painting, "Brigadoon."

Traditionally the Forest Theater Guild has staged summer offerings at Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater. Beginning this fall, it will also stage productions at Cherry Hall in Carmel. On Golden Pond opens there Nov. 9 and Don't Drink the Water starring Sam and Edie Karas bows April 5.

For additional information, contact the Forest Theater Guild at 626-1681.

A STEEL patinated sculpture, "Feathermaid" by D. Ellen Beinhorn, was donated by the Sculpture House and Gardens of Carmel Highlands to the second annual Carmel Art Auction. The benefit is set Wednesday, Oct. 10.

PIANIST Martha Anne Verbit intersperses keyboard classics with quips that reveal her astonishing life spent in a multi-century time warp. "An Evening of Piano Theatre" begins at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 5 in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. For advance tickets, call 649-5561.

Pianist presents classics, characters during concert

"AN EVENING of Piano Theatre" comes to Carmel when Martha Anne Verbit performs Friday, Oct. 5 in Sunset Theater. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the theater located on San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Verbit has crafted a one-woman show of time-warp monologues which frame keyboard classics by Rossini, Liszt, Satie, Ravel, Poulenc and Gershwin.

Joining the composers as characters in her monologues are Dorothy Parker, Coco Chanel, George Sand, Jean Cocteau, Serge Diaghilev and the Duchess of Yawning.

"I always move with the right crowd," says Verbit. "I met Ravel at Coco Chanel's, smoked cigars with George Sand, I sat on George Gershwin's lap ... would I lie to you?"

Her performance includes about 45 minutes of music and 45 minutes of monologues throughout the show, and the music alternates with the monologues.

Tickets are priced at $15 and are available in advance at Center Stage Ticketing in Monterey, or charge by phone at 649-5561. Tickets are also available the night of the performance at the Sunset Theater box office.

For additional information, call 624-3996.

Jewish food delicacies served with flair in CV

MOUTH-WATERING food, glorious food! All will be available at the Third Annual Jewish Food Fair presented by Congregation Beth Israel on Sunday, Oct. 7 at the home of the Jewish community of the Monterey Peninsula located at 5716 Carmel Valley Road in Carmel Valley.

The fair will begin at 10 a.m. and end by 3 p.m., and will feature tastings, on-site meals and take-home foods. Last year's Jewish Food Fair was such a success that all food booths sold out early. This year more food will be planned. All favorite Jewish foods will be available, including lox and bagels, pastrami sandwiches, many kinds of cheesecakes, New York-style seltzer drinks such as egg creams, and much more. Try homemade chicken soup with matzo balls, blintzes or knishes for a real Old World taste experience.

Cheesecake and kugel bake-offs will highlight the day, with everyone invited to pay a fee and "Judge the Judges" by tasting the entries for yourself.

Entertainment will be provided throughout the day, featuring Israeli singers and dancers and Jewish music from around the world.

Tours of the synagogue will be given throughout the day. Visitors will have a chance to see a Torah rescued from the Nazi Holocaust that is now housed safely at Beth Israel.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for seniors and teens. Children under 12 are admitted free.

Parking is at Carmel Middle School, and free shuttle transportation to the fair will be available every five minutes. Door prizes will be awarded only to those who park at the Middle School.

The Drunkard

The wages of drink are outlined in The Drunkard, when a totally respectable Edward Middleton becomes downtrodden after being tempted with drink. Of course, as in all good melodramas, all ends well with Edward back in the loving arms of his family. The title role is played by Kurt Menke.

California's First Theatre is the setting for The Drunkard. The theater, the oldest in the state, is located at the corner of Scott and Pacific streets in historic downtown Monterey.

Seating is at 7:30 p.m. for the 8 p.m. curtain on Fridays and Saturdays.

Tickets are $7 for adults, $5.50 for seniors and teens and $4.50 for subteens. The theater box office is open 1 to 8 p.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays.

For tickets or information, call 375-4916 or 649-5561.

A personal handwritten letter from an unknown psychic to Jack London's has been dug from the sand where the first Murphy once stood...

Dear Mr. London,

May I call you Jack? Jack, I have recently had a vision, clear as crystal, of a friendly place to eat & drink in Carmel. Jack, this place would be named after you!

People from around Carmel will frequent Jack London's. Wherein, they will dicuss current topics as they enjoy delicious food & tantalizing libations...

Don't worry, Jack. The prices will be reasonable enough for everyone. In fact, I have seen a great reputation for this establishment as the place to go for Pizza, Burgers, New York Steak & Calamari.

I hope you realize, Jack London, how this small bar & grill will help immortalize your name!

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Blazingly beautiful

MORE WORD-PHOTOS from Monterey Jazz Festival 1990—

The Sunday night crowd's great affection for pianist Michel Petrucianni. His takes on delicate ballads brought bright silence upon those thousands of listeners. Intelligent interplay between synth adept Adam Holzman and drummer Victor Jones.

That Sugar Man — Stanley Turrentine — played it sweet and funky all set long.

Vocalist Diane Reeves. Technique to spare; blazingly beautiful appearance. One wishes that she could simply serve the material. Diane and Streisand apparently share performance theories. Songs as personality-centered showcases.

Dizzy and his guitarist — Ed Cherry — celebrating the old mystery and perpetual worth of The Blues.

Teacher Mark Bidelman's Soquel High School vocal group sang with conviction and harmonic subtlety during Sunday afternoon's student show. Strong-voiced member India Valasquez won a private scholarship named for the late jazz vocalist Carol Mildon; Miss Valasquez scats better than most in her age group.

Superb pianists in support roles: Norman Simmons behind Joe Williams...Billy Childs with Miss Reeves.

Ones to watch. Drummer Mel Brown's trumpet player—Bobby Medina. Bassist Rebekah Griffin of Monterey County Honor Band, put together by MJF Education Committee. She attends Robert Louis Stevenson School.

Trombonist Tricky Lofton in the front line of Mark Naftalin's Blues Revue. Gesturing with plunger mute: "This's one shot. Oh, I'm doing some stuff with Jimmy McCracklin. San Francisco's slow. I'll go to Europe and freelance next year. Stockholm." His beautiful baby daughter, China, sitting on Garden Stage apron throughout the set and eating green grapes from a paper cup.

Damp night. Hot set. Gerald Wilson Big Band's rock-solid trombone section—Thurman Green, Maurice Spears, Luis Bonilla (grad of the 20-year-old MJF student system). Gerald conducting: backlighted white hair, tux, dramatic gestures, dignity.

Boston vocalist Rebecca Paris watching San Franciscan Kitty Margolis work out: "She's one of the best scat singers I've ever heard."

Cab driver Kristin Shoemaker: "Maybe his limo messed up. I had Dizzy with me for two hours. I'm from Chicago. When I was small, my mother would take me to jam sessions at clubs over by Cabrini Green (housing project). And you know what? Dizzy remembered my mother."

Bassist Ray Drummond wandering about as part of his "pure (non-playing) vacation." New albums scheduled; he promised a list for publication herein.

Carmel waitress: "I've been watching Monterey Jazz Festival crowds for more than a quarter century. This year, lots of the old faces didn't show. Probably one in six of my regulars made it by.

Jazz Tides...

The festival population's changing – many fewer black people."

Lenny Castro (fine percussionist for the Stan Getz Septet) kidding Gillespie down in the dressing room. "Hey, Diz – do we get paid today" Pause. "Diz – do you really make more than I do?"

The man stays dapper. Jose LaCrosby of San Francisco owns 40 sets of matching capes and bowlers – beige, burgundy, white, on and on. He has been standing out in this fest's crowds for two decades. Monterey – where fans win some fame for sheer style.

DOING THAT one-hour special on composer and arranger Tadd Dameron over KRML Jazz Radio gave your present correspondent a rich notion. Tadd was the first to put bebop's discoveries into big band charts and it's beyond question that he influenced Gil Evans, Ralph Burns, Pete Rugolo. These men in turn assisted the imagination of Leith Stevens, whose jazz score for The Wild One made film history. So today's highly textured and impressionistic jazz writing for the movies started with Tadd. Not a daffy claim.

KUUMBWA JAZZ Center of Santa Cruz opens its 15th anniversary series ("backstage perspectives") with noted jazz writer and social critic Nat Hentoff on Friday night (10/5). He'll talk about producing the Sound of Jazz television show as well as about Monk, Mingus, the music's future. Satarts at eight o'clock and costs $10 per. Call Kuumbwa at 1-427-2227 for credit card arrangements and reservations.

The show over there on Monday evening (10/8) – band fronted by guitarist Bill Frisell. With Joey Baron (drums), Hank Roberts (cello), Kermit Driscoll (bass). Eight o'clock; $12 apiece; Center Stage Ticketing.

Vocalist Gail Dobson works the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club on Thursday evening (10/4). Others: Mamou (10/5-6), Alan Berman (10/7), Monday Night Football (10/8), Jack and Ed Show (10/9), Don Pendergrass (10/10), Smith Dobson Septet (10/11).

Drummer Bill LePine's group will hold forth Friday and Saturday nights (10/5-6) at Monterey Beach Hotel. Reedman John Cortes, John Donaldson at the piano, Ian Fugate on bass.

Surprise-seekers must check out the jam sessions hosted by bassist Norm Ross at The Firehouse on Thursday and Saturday evenings. Don't forget the trusty Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra on Monday nights at Mission Ranch Barn.

HEARTFELT CONDOLENCES to the family of reed player Dennis Jackson – son of outstanding area drummer Bill Jackson and Bill's dear spouse Vivian. Dennis died at age 35 in a San Francisco hospital. Survivors include wife Elizabeth and three daughters. The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the National Cirrhosis Society in Dennis Jackson's name.

SAN FRANCISCO Recording Academy announces that its forum entitled Fighting Music Censorship will be held on Wednesday evening (10/10) at Life on the Water Theater in Fort Mason Center. Kicks off at seven o'clock.

Panelists: concert producer Bill Graham, Academy president Michael Greene, television's Dominique DiPrima, journalist Ann Powers, selected disc jockeys.

"Concrete ways to battle music censorship" was the stated objective. More info available from Susie Foot at (415) 441-8934. Dominique's the daughter of Amiri Baraka (was LeRoi Jones) and poet Diane DiPrima.

SIGHT BITES: The jazz series produced by Tup Lohse at Giovanni's in Concord rolls ahead on Saturday night (10/6) with Evidence. This quartet presents "the complete works of Thelonius Monk." Bill Douglass (acoustic bass and flutes), Robert Kaufman (drums), guitarists Randy Vincent and Steve Cardenas. Door charge of $7 per; bar service and solid menu.

Ed Mendenhall (pianist for this year's Monterey Jazz Festival High School All-Stars) has begun studies at Berklee School of Music in Boston. He said he already has hooked up with a pro vocalist and she's booking gigs. Ed graduated from Robert Louis Stevenson this past summer.

San Jose State University will host the 1992 International Computer Music Conference. That word came from Allen Strange, overseer of the university's Electro-Acoustic Studio. "This confirms our position in the international community."

Kimball's of San Francisco has Chris Conner (10/10-13). Coming in November – Brazilian composer and performer Dori Caymmi (11/7-10).

Nellie T. Ross of Wyoming held two important firsts for women. She was the first woman governor in the U.S. from 1925 to 1927 and later was the first woman to serve as director of the U.S. Mint.

Children believe what their parents tell them.

"You disgust me!"

"You're pathetic. You can't do anything right!"

"You can't be my kid."

"Hey stupid! Don't you know how to listen."

"I wish you were never born!"

Words hit as hard as a fist.
Next time, stop and listen to what you're saying.
You might not believe your ears.

Take time out. Don't take it out on your kid.

American & European Fine Paintings offers eclectic collection of work

American & European Fine Paintings offers an eclectic collection of paintings by both American and European artists of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Owner David Pratt points out that American & European Fine Paintings takes pride in providing a wide selection of fine, well-documented works in an affordable price range.

Pratt is the dealer to consult when considering paintings from the Victorian and Edwardian eras by "Les Petits Maitres."

By offering works of less-known artists, the gallery enables collectors to gather truly unique works of art.

If it's art you're selling, the gallery is anxious to purchase works painted here and abroad during the period between 1850-1930.

EACH DOLL created by artist Jane Cather of Carmel Valley has its own story to tell, and each is a special blend of both new and antique materials. Miss Cather and about 25 of her dolls will be assembled Saturday, Oct. 6 at the Tancredi and Morgen Country Store, in the Valley Hills Center, Carmel Valley. Hours are 10 to 4.

Special dolls breeze into the Witch's Cottage Oct. 6

The perky pumpkin, Betty Lou, dressed as a ballerina cat for the Halloween Dance; a young pumpkin in widows' weeds who has lost two husbands, one to mold and the other to a pie; Georgene Bliss-Fenton, a lucky shopping doll who wears the coveted smirk of a good buy; treating the scratches we all get sometimes in the hedge is Francesca, the hedgehog medicine woman wearing elaborate medicine beads; a winged twilight traveler with hair of stars; a rabbit girl presently pursued by Peter's younger brother, but hoping to get Peter and a toad doll in the first overnight bag of Jenny toad containing fly muffins, party head bows, wart cover make up, fly swatter and kiss me lipstick are some of the cloth dolls created by artist Jane Cather of Carmel Valley.

Made By Night, the name of Jane's company, began in 1982 in Connecticut. Miss Cather begins by writing and illustrating stories from her imagination. Jane feels knowing who they are and what they think works well as the springboard for the clothes design and the accessories of her dolls. Combining new and antique material, lace, buttons, beads and jewelry with hand embroidery and painted designs, each doll is a work of art. All the dolls are put out in the light of, at least, one full moon as part of Jane's strong belief in the importance of our connection to nature and the cosmos.

The dolls have appeared in Country Living, Creative Ideas for Living, The New York Times, House Beautiful, Good Housekeeping, Quilting Today, Collector's Showcase and Country Home.

The Witch's Cottage, a tented addition to the Tancredi and Morgen Antique shop, will include a hearth and keeping area for stewing a brew and broom repair, a dressing table corner of special costumes, a magic mirror and crystal ball (double check on predictions), pumpkins, black cats, moonbeam storage pots and a table full of Jane Cather's cloth dolls.

Miss Cather and about 25 of her dolls, each for sale, will be assembled in the Witch's Cottage, Saturday, Oct. 6, at Tancredi and Morgen Country Store, Valley Hills Center, Carmel Valley, 3.4 miles from Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. Hours are 10-4. Telephone 625-4477.

The Decoy Gallery caters to wildlife enthusiasts

In addition to decoys, the store also carries an extensive gift line of mugs, pillows and plates, all featuring their own call of the wild.

Trotter Galleries emphasizes early California school

Terry and Paula Trotter take great pride in their extensive research and quality presentation of the 19th and early 20th century artwork featured in their gallery. Their focus is to offer quality paintings, with emphasis on the Early California School, to an ever-growing collectorship.

"In the 10 years since establishing our gallery, we've experienced a growth in interest in California's artistic heritage that is unprecedented. The earlier academically trained artists of the West Coast depicted beautiful scenes on canvas which have a relevance to us today.

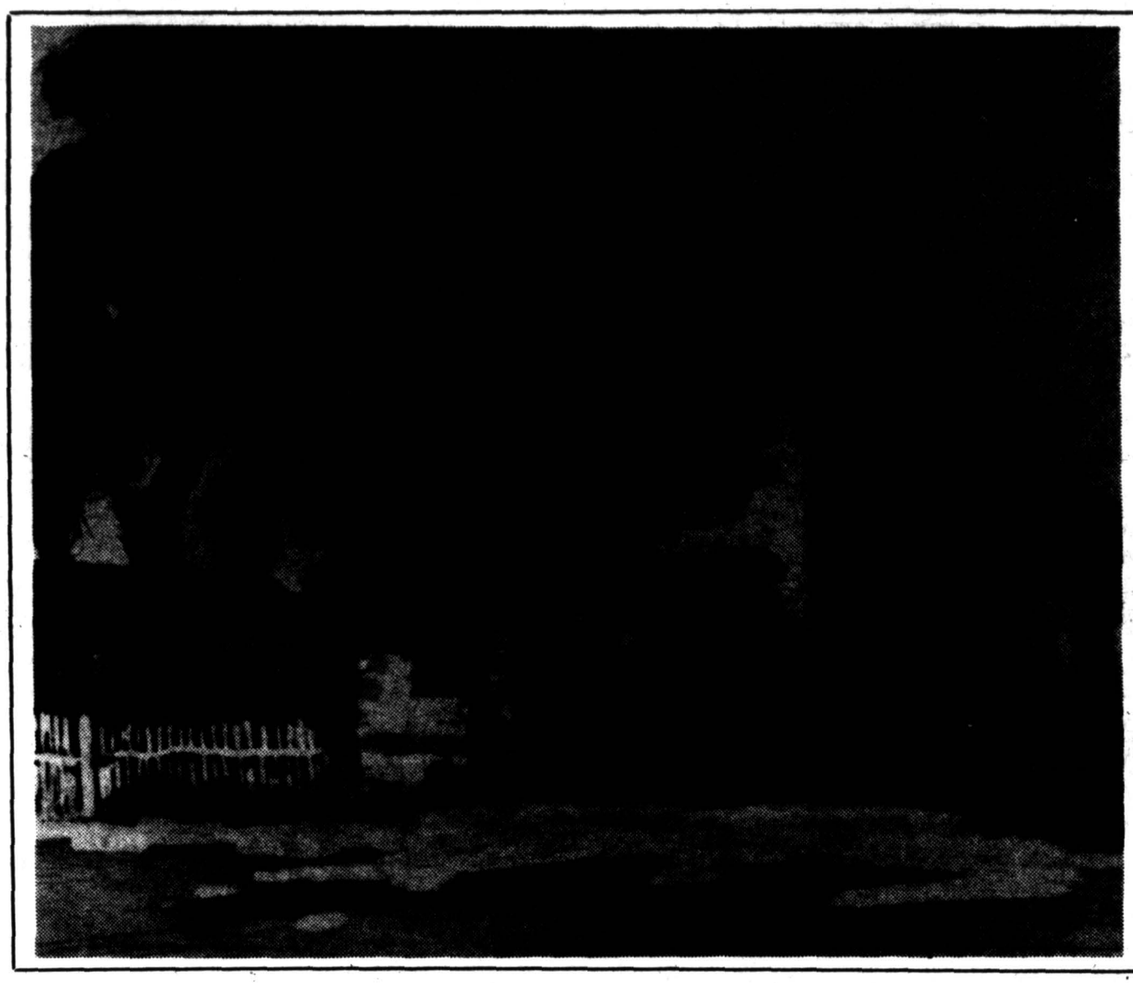
"From before the turn-of-the-century many of these paintings were exhibited nationally alongside the more well known East Coast artists' works. The inherent beauty of these canvases helped to entice many to visit and settle in California's Golden Coast."

Images of California fill the Trotter Galleries in Pacific Grove. The breath-taking scenery outside the gallery is mirrored in the paintings of the Early California artists represented here.

The gallery is proud to be involved in the burgeoning interest in the California plein air movement. Currently one can see works by Francis McComas, Franz Bischoff, Mary DeNeale Morgan, Paul Dougherty, Jean Mannheim and Selden Gile, to name a few.

A client "want list" is maintained and your inquiries are invited on special artists and subject matter.

Trotter Galleries, established since 1980, is located at 309 Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove. For additional information call 373-7166.



MARY DeNEALE Morgan (1868-1948) depicted Curtis House — Monterey, in gouache, pen and ink. The work is titled on the reverse "This house was the first post office in Monterey." For additional information, contact Trotter Galleries, 373-7166.

Maison Val Du Soleil brings French artifacts to CV

Just as Louis IV is remembered as the "Sun God," Maison Val Du Soleil reigns in Carmel Valley as "the establishment is the Valley of the Sun."

Reviving French history through rare antiques and selected paintings, Germaine Lestrade complements Carmel Village with nearly 4,000 square feet of original French antiques and fine art.

Germaine's love for French antiques began as a young girl in France. Living amongst these rare furnishings, by the age of 15 she had a collection of books on French antiques. Five years ago Germaine opened her own French antique establishment in the Carmel Village.

Maison Val Du Soleil specializes in 18th century and early 19th century antiques from countryside farms, villages and townships in France. Each piece on display is one-of-a-kind. Since modern manufacturing remained undeveloped until the latter part of the 19th century, every antique in the showroom has a unique flair and quality... long ago custom-ordered for a French family... hand carved... hand built... and hand finished to fit a room or home.

The "personality" that is carved into each antique reveals information as to where it was originally created in France, the era, the tools used, and the status of the owner. Because many seasoned enthusiasts enjoy researching and collecting antiques that share common backgrounds or histories, Germaine is skilled at acquiring French antiques of particular eras, styles and regions. Well studied and thoroughly versed in the field of French antiques, Germaine makes the path of collecting fine antiques exciting, educational and memorable.

Much of the "effect" of a French antique is in the choice of the wood. "Woods selected in the 18th and early 19th century were exceptionally beautiful," says Germaine.

Within the various types of woods that Germaine prefers, walnut is her favorite. However, she appreciates the many other types of woods used by artisans, noting that oak offers a very sturdy look, chestnut provides a deep robust color, wild cherry wood allows for great variation of color and personality and mahogany shimmers when finely buffed.

The main points that Germaine looks for are elegance of proportion, and the type of wood used. Each ingredient is very important for determining value, quality and aesthetics.

"Today, the antiques I carry are very difficult to find," explains Germaine. "As each antique is uncovered and purchased, rarity increases. I find my antiques in small French villages, on large rural farms, outlying manors and country residences. I avoid Paris entirely. I reserve the City only to observe prices."

Whether one is partial to the Restoration Period, the Empire Period, the period of Louis Phillippe, or others, Maison Val Du Soleil displays such "period" treasures to complement modern life.

Remarkably, Germaine's prices are highly competitive. This is because she buys direct. She easily competes with establishments in San Francisco, Los Angeles, and other major centers. As such, patrons travel from San Jose, Sacramento, the Bay Area, Santa Barbara, Fresno, Los Angeles, Orange County... and even the East Coast, to acquire antiques from Maison Val Du Soleil.

Maintaining a showroom offering variety and versatility, it is the "amoire" that has captured Germaine's inner passion.

"I have a special appreciation for amoires," states Germaine. "Therefore I always have a lovely selection. At the same time one can find a diverse selection of buffets, chests of drawers, tables, chairs, beds... just about everything. Allied to this, are decorative items and fine art."

Presenting original oils and watercolors by local artists, as well as contemporary and deceased French painters, the balance between rare antiques and fine art is deliciously harmonious. Each painting is carefully framed and mounted for prime viewing. Styles range from landscapes, to country settings, still lifes, harbor scenes and cityscapes. Impressionism clearly reigns.

Upcoming special events include two shows, one featuring paintings by Patricia Dufrain and the works of Jean Pierre Segalen.

Whether local or from out of town, take the time to enjoy the sublime drive into Carmel Valley. Your end destination will be the "Establishment in the Valley of the Sun," better known as Maison Val Du Soleil.

Art is a passion for staff of VonDerAhe Galleries

The people at VonDerAhe Galleries, Ltd. have a slogan they try to live up to: "Art is not our middle name, it is our passion."

Indeed, featuring perhaps the largest selection of art under one roof, the staff works hard at establishing a close relationship with both the artist and collector.

At VonDerAhe, you are allowed to browse, look and enjoy the numerous works. The sensitive staff is always there to assist, but never imposes on the collector.

This fall, VonDerAhe is proud to introduce the works of Alex Makin, whose contemporary oil and acrylic creations are already being displayed at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

You'll also enjoy the works of wildlife artist Jackie Marie Vaux, who is noted for her paintings of large cats.

Local artists featured at VonDerAhe include Wa Ming, Bob Gallagher, Elizabeth Palmer, Victor Zane, Dianne Zum and Susan Milken.

Works by 30 others from around the globe are also displayed at the gallery.

VonDerAhe Galleries, Ltd. is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and until 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The gallery is located at the Doubletree Inn in downtown Monterey. Phone 655-1001.

Gallery Americana pays tribute to Maurice Harvey's career

A "Latest Works" show of paintings by Maurice Harvey will open at Gallery Americana on Saturday, Oct. 6. Mr. Harvey will be present. The gallery is located at the corner of Sixth and Lincoln in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

This, his first show in two years, will feature landscapes and architecturally oriented garden scenes from both the United States and England, where Mr. Harvey recently spent six weeks. His scenes transform the commonplace into the extraordinary, creating a sensation among his collectors worldwide. This year's collection is sure to carry on this tradition.

Miner's Gallery Americana, founded almost 21 years ago, has become one of the largest and finest galleries on the West Coast, while enjoying steadily increasing stature through its worldwide clientele.

Drawing on Rosemary Miner's prior years showing her paintings in major galleries across America and on Ralph Miner's many years in architectural design and management systems, a certain focus has been obtained.

Gallery Americana's philosophy of fine art can best be summed up by artist-philosopher Robert Henri: "All manifestations of art are but landmarks in the progress of human spirit ... to some degree every human being is an artist. He needs but to see pictures with his active mind, look into them for the things that belong to him, and he will find soon enough in himself an art connoisseur."

Gallery Americana's roster of superbly gifted artists is comprised of more than 60 contemporary painters and sculptors and covers a wide spectrum of impressionist and realist works. Gallery Americana has also become one of the most noted sculpture galleries on the West Coast.

For additional information, phone 624-5071.

CRIMSON CASCADE* is among the original oils by Maurice Harvey that will be showcased at his one-man show. A reception for the artist is set Saturday, Oct. 6 at Gallery Americana in Carmel.

Take care when framing: visit Spanish Bay Galleries

Spanish Bay Galleries is a custom frame shop. It is a veritable gallery of picture framing ideas. Frame samples deck the walls from modern wood and inexpensive metal to the classics of ornate silver and antique gold.

Mats range from any nuance of color whether composed of matboard, linen, silk or suede. Museum treatment will preserve your valuable artwork with acid-free materials. Anything can be framed from posters to needlepoints, Picassos to Rembrandts, orchids to Holograms.

Owner Skip Kadish has been a framer since 1973 with more than 20 years experience in the visual arts as an artist and teacher of aesthetics.

"Framing should preserve and enhance the artwork, not distract or overpower it," says Skip. "I suggest design that will complement the art for years to come; not a momentary fad that is in style only briefly. Timeless design is much more harmonious."

At Spanish Bay Galleries there is genuine caring and dedication devoted to the visual appearance. Color, texture, line, balance, proportion; it sounds like a lesson in aesthetics. That's part of the service. Educate the consumer, then it's not so frustrating and mystifying.

"The more you know about our business, the happier you will be with the final product" – words from the framer who cares, Skip Kadish. Feel free to call and ask questions about art, picture framing, cost estimates or professional advice.

Skip adds that Spanish Bay Galleries also displays a wide variety of vintage photographs of the Monterey Peninsula from the late 1800s and early 1900s, which are worth a closer look.

Spanish Bay Galleries is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Sunday and is located in the Russell Service Center, 2108 Sunset Drive in Pacific Grove, just up the street from the Fishwife Restaurant. It's across the street from Hayward Lumber between Asilomar and the 17-Mile Drive Gate leading into Pebble Beach.

Phone 373-0554. There is plenty of free and easy parking.

Artist's road to success travelled in a Dodge van

By DAVID LELAND

Sitting quietly in her Carmel Valley Village home, pastel artist Lesley Harrison appears as a picture of gratitude.

She knows what it is like to possess nothing in the world except her love of art. She also knows what it is like to reap the harvest of creative and monetary success.

"For 15 years I've been worrying about how I'm going to pay my bills each month," says Harrison, 39, who in the late '70s travelled the Southwest art show circuit in a run-down Dodge van with her black Doberman, Tessa. "But it's getting better; I've been blessed."

THIS PASTEL entitled "Dubious Friends" was five years in the making. It began with a photograph of a horse and ended when Harrison found the perfect backdrop of a mustard field.

Indeed, Harrison's equestrian and wildlife paintings now fetch $10,000 in galleries. That's not to mention Santa Monica-based Three Swans Limited Edition Prints, which markets Harrison's prints nationwide for as much as $190 apiece.

Locally, Harrison's prints can be found at Gallery Framing & Gifts at Valley Hills Center in Carmel Valley.

Harrison's pastels reveal a realism usually known only in photographs. She has, however, battled the established art world for many years in an attempt to place her works.

"Pastels are not really an accepted medium," says Harrison, adding that the radiant, chalk-like pigment neither cracks nor fades with time. "Most people don't even know what they are. There's been the belief that you can't sell pastels and you can't sell horses."

So much for established thought.

With success, Harrison has been able to slow down her production from an average of 30 paintings a year to an even dozen in her small living room studio

The work can be agonizing. Because pastels can smear and crumble, Harrison blocks off only about an inch of her work at a time.

"They're selling almost as fast as I can paint them now," she says, adding that each painting takes about one month and represents about 30 hours of work a week.

To say that Harrison is married to her work would be an understatement, despite the fact that she has tapered off from toiling 15-hour work days.

"Energy, emotion, everything goes into my painting," says Harrison, who has been divorced from her husband for some years. "I'm in love with what I do."

Some things are just meant to be – just ask Harrison, who can find no other reason for her artistic gift.

"You are born with a talent," says Harrison, who grew up in rural Sacramento during the 1950s. "It (art) wasn't one of the things I planned; it just happened."

Harrison's innate talent could be seen as early as kindergarten when, after being

ART & Antiques

Lesley Harrison struggled to gain acceptance for pastels caught drawing in class, she would be dragged to the principal's office so her incredible work could be seen.

In junior and senior high school, Harrison's friends would employ her to draw pictures. Says Harrison, "It was never serious; I always did it for fun."

She was, however, turned off by the rigid teachings of her eighth-grade art teacher.

"I still hate people telling me what to do; I think it's the artistic temperment," she says, adding that she still took an A in the course. "I hated to paint bowls of fruit and stuff — I wanted to paint horses."

But Harrison had never felt comfortable with oils or watercolors — something was lacking. That all changed when she viewed the works of pastel artist Don Schwartz.

"I went and bought a starter set of pastels and I was in love," says Harrison, who sold her first pastel image of a bird for $35.

The ensuing years were difficult for Harrison as she perfected her craft; travelling was a way of life.

"I still travel, but I stay in hotels now," says Harrison, whose originals can also be seen at Christoper Queen Gallery in Duncan's Mill and Grolet Galleries in Pasadena. "(Also), I can afford to eat."

Her fortune changed when Gallery Americana, in Carmel, began to show her work in 1982.

The creative process for Harrison has always been a journey into the unknown. Often the sojourn begins when she is walking one of her two dogs on their four-mile morning walks in Carmel Valley.

"I just go away when I plan these paintings," says Harrison of her mental wanderings, which often leave her disoriented.

But good things often take time to develop.

Her painting titled "Dubious Friends" was five years in the planning stages, which began with a photograph of a thoroughbred horse — the interim was spent trying to find the perfect background.

Harrison is undaunted by being thrown into an artistic cauldron.

"Artists are strange people, even though we appear normal," she says. "If I can't paint, I'm not happy."

Harrison adds that she has little need for the business surrounding art. For that reason, she entertains no notions about someday opening her own gallery.

"An artist should paint. Business gets you so fragmented; it's tough to put yourself under so much pressure," she explains.

What then, does Harrison's future hold?

"Who knows," she says. "That's what's fun about being an artist."

WHEN SHE was still in elementary school, Lesley Harrison's art work had already become a favorite topic of school administrators. Here she is shown displaying a drawing of a horse she created while in fifth grade. (David Leland photo.)

MARK KOSTABI crafted the sculpture, "Art of the Deal," borrowing the title from Donald Trump's best-selling book. The work can be viewed at Hanson Galleries on Ocean Avenue near San Carlos Street, Carmel.

Mark Kostabi sculpts 'Art of the Deal'

Now collectors have the opportunity to acquire Mark Kostabi's humorous and ironic statement about life in today's business world in a progressive bronze sculpture, "Art of the Deal."

Borrowing its title from Donald Trump's best-selling book, "Art of the Deal" conveys Kostabi's message about the traps that are set for us in today's society.

Two figures face one another across a bargaining table. An oversized mousetrap holds a document one figure is about to sign – despite the obvious danger of the mousetrap. The image is the synthesis of big-time business dealings with a sly and witty allusion to the famous Post-Impressionist painting by Cezanne, "Card Players."

Kostabi's sculpture is available at Hanson Galleries in Carmel-by-the-Sea. The gallery is located at the corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

Please phone for more information, 625-3111. The gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Trotter's Antiques collection a source of pride for its owners

Trotter's Antiques, the beautiful and completely renovated antique shop on the corner of Forest and Laurel in Pacific Grove, is the result of a dream that began in England in 1958. It was while stationed there that Dick and Lee Trotter developed a keen interest in antiques.

What started as an avocation soon turned into a success story when, in 1964 they visited the Monterey Peninsula and decided Pacific Grove was the place to raise their family and build an antique business.

Recently, a need for more space to accommodate their ever-growing markets made it necessary to give up their shop of 25 years at 225 Forest Ave. and relocate to new, larger quarters at 301-303 Forest.

This spacious, attractive location is indeed a fine testimonial to a lifetime devoted to offering the very best in 18th and 19th century antiques.

Trotter's Antiques is open 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and by appointment. The location is 301 Forest Ave. (at Laurel) in Pacific Grove, and major credit cards are accepted.

For additional information, call 373-3505.

THE CORNER of Forest and Laurel in Pacific Grove is home to the completed renovated Trotter's Antiques. The spacious store is open 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and by appointment.

San Juan Bautista: where antique dealers shop

When the Associated Antique Dealers of America held its first national convention in California, members took one day off and went shopping ... in San Juan Bautista.

The little mission town wasn't near their hotel in San Francisco. They went out of their way because they had heard so much about San Juan Bautista from other professionals in the trade.

Admit it: cruising Highway 101, just east of the peninsula, you've passed the San Juan Bautista exit dozens of times. Now is the time to shop where Carmel dealers like to visit.

Butterchurn Antiques. Owned by Dick and Doris Mayfield, the store has English and American furniture featuring numerous tables and buffets. In a variety of curio cabinets are a great selection of old cut crystal dating back to the 1890s, in a variety of patterns. The store also carries a selection of old pottery pieces including Van Briggle, Rockwood and Catalina. There are also kitchen collectibles and primitives.

The Mayfields travel worldwide in search of merchandise, and recently brought back sterling silver from Mexico.

Lillian Johnson Antiques. This store is one of the largest Haviland dealers in the country, having been in operation since 1967.

The store occupies the entire ground floor of the historic old Bluebird Hotel building which was built in 1894.

The shop does extensive advertising for its mail order business, both buying and selling china to customers nationwide. Johnson carries more than 6,000 different Haviland patterns, which can be purchased in a single piece or entire set.

In addition to china, Lillian Johnson Antiques carries a variety of linens, glassware, silver and brass.

Rosanna's. Located upstairs in a historic old schoolhouse, Rosanna's carries a general line of antiques and collectibles.

One section of the shop features old kitchen collectibles and primitives, while the other offers items of glass, china, furniture and costume jewelry.

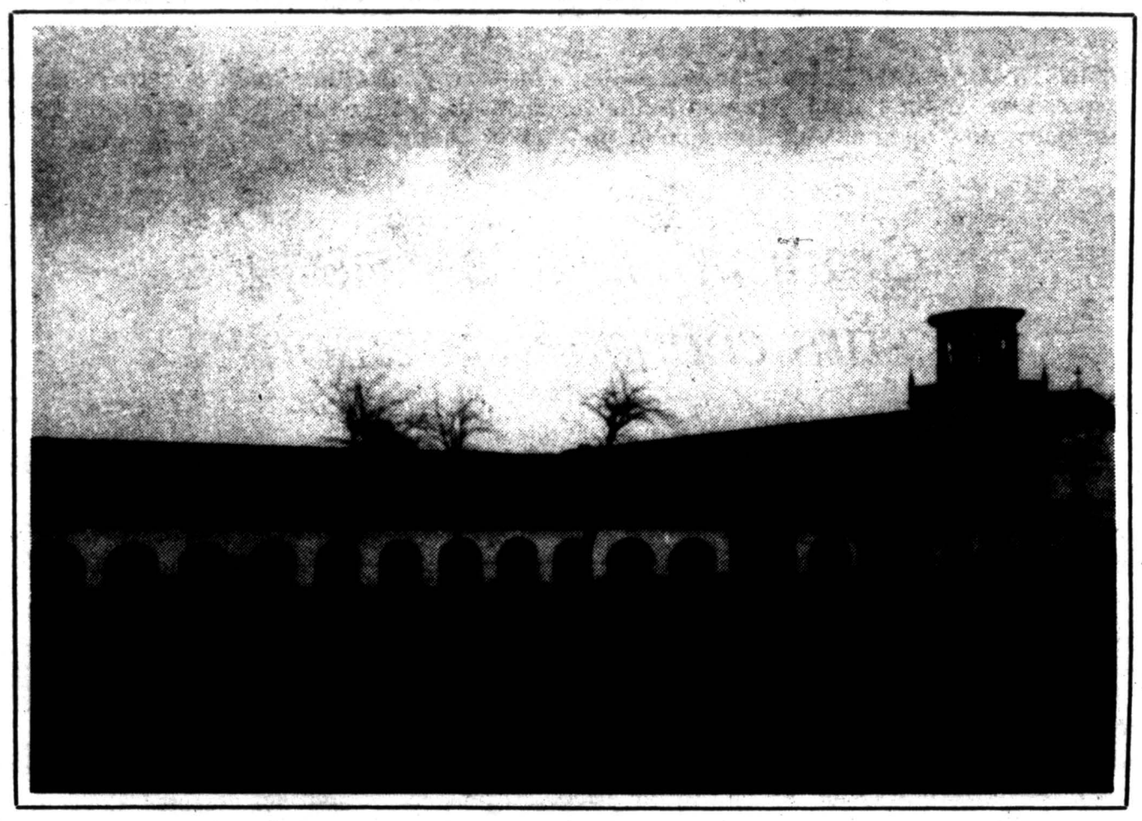
Rosanna's also features new handcrafted items from Central California.

Bear Flag Gallery. Fine arts and antiques are shown in this unique gallery. The paintings, graphics and sculpture are attractively displayed with a fine collection of antiques and accessories in the many rooms.

Artist/owner Les Anderson exhibits his watercolors of California scenes. More than 40 of his paintings have been reproduced in prints and are available.

Bear Flag Gallery carries a collection of American, French and Italian furniture and art objects. The shop also features a collection of New Guinea and African art.

Call 623-4148 for more information.



FAMED FOR its mission, the town of San Juan Bautista is also home to numerous antique shops that boast a national following. San Juan Bautista is located north of Salinas off U.S. 101. (Pat Hathaway photo).

EARLY CALIFORNIA paintings are featured at LaPorte's Fine Art Gallery. Featured artists include Armin Hansen, William Keith, John Gamble, Frank Myers and others. LaPorte's Fine Art Gallery is at 716 Lighthouse Ave., Suite A, Pacific Grove. For details, call 375-6043.

LaPorte's Fine Art continues a peninsula tradition

LaPorte's Fine Art features early California paintings in its Pacific Grove gallery.

LaPorte's Gallery represents a tradition on the peninsula. As a third-generation family member, Bill Turrentine is committed to continuing the kind of integrity that produced the 63 year history of this time-honored business. Bill's grandfather, William R. LaPorte, founded the family business in 1924.

When the previous generations retired from LaPorte's Antiques, Auctions, Fine Arts and Fine Jewelry, Bill was free to pursue his main interest of fine art.

From the time of his youth, his grandfather took him along to see the collections and estates referred to LaPorte's by clients and attorneys. At an early age Bill learned the meaning of professional discretion and confidentiality.

LaPorte's Fine Art features impressionist works from artists spanning the period from the 19th and early 20th centuries, including those of Armin Hansen, N.A.; Paul Daughtery, N.A.; Frank Myers, N.A.; John Gamble; Dana Bartlett; William Keith and others.

Selected works by important early California artists are sought for purchase or consignment.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and by appointment.

Visit LaPorte's Fine Art Gallery located about one-half block from the Pacific Grove post office, at 716 Lighthouse Ave, Suite A. Phone 375-6043.

Lost art of gilding revived by Loran Speck

The lost art of gilding has resurfaced in Carmel under the guidance of Loran Speck in his Framing and Gilding Studio.

Rapidly becoming a lost art, gilding began when the Egyptians applied gold leaves to cherished objects.

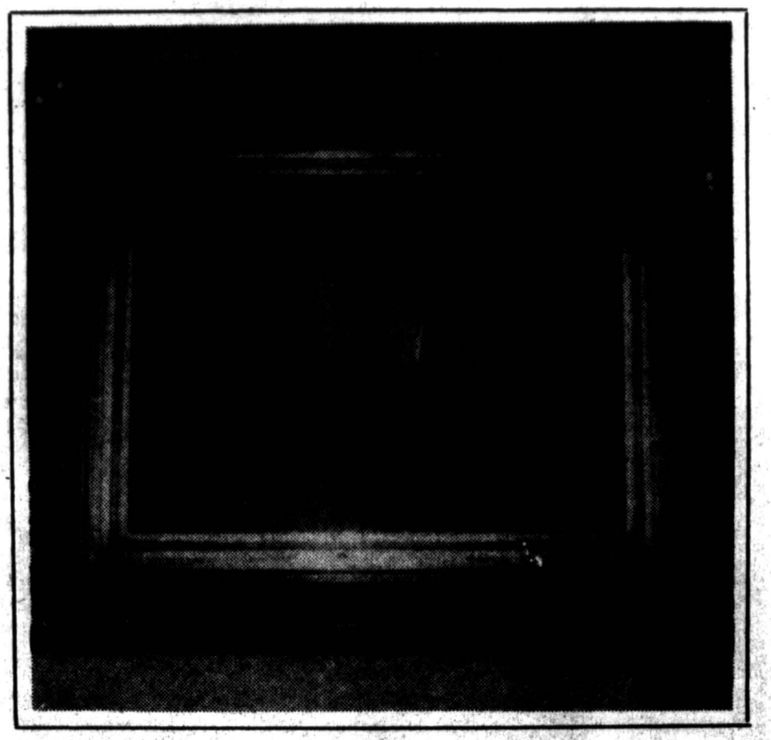
During the Renaissance Period, framers began to gild their works to enhance art.

But in the late 1800s, mass manufacturing of wooden frames all but killed the intricate skill.

Speck, an artist working in a wide variety mediums, began the labor intensive craft of gilding to better represent his work.

"I've always admired this type of framing, that's what motivated me," he says.

Indeed, using the same tools that have been in use for centuries, gilders apply five coats of gesso to the raw frame, which is then sanded. Bole (clay and rabbit skin glue) is then applied, which is topped with gold leaf. The last step is adding the correct toning to the frame.



TRADITIONAL, time-tested tools are employed by Loran Speck and his Framing & Gilding Studio, located in the Mission Patio, Carmel. For details, call 624-3727.

One of the first gilding studios in Carmel, Speck's shop is a mecca for area artists seeking to have their work enhanced. Art collectors also take advantage of Speck's gilded frames for special works of art.

Loran Speck Framing & Gilding Studio is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and is located in Mission Patio. Phone 624-3727.

Painted Desert evokes spirit of American Southwest

Homesick for Santa Fe? Miss the vibrant colors and creative ideas that you saw when you visited the Southwest? Take a short ride to downtown Salinas and it's all available in a beautiful little gallery called Painted Desert.

There you will find original art, traditional and contemporary jewelry, Navajo rugs, Pueblo pottery, Hopi Kachinas, Taos drums, posters and books.

THE ARTWORK of the American Southwest is only as far as a drive to Salinas, home of the Painted Desert. The gallery is at 36 W. Alisal St.

You'll immediately recognize the names of the artists and craftsmen represented in this shop. There are lithographs by R.C. Gorman, jewelry by Richard Lindsay, Don Lucas, Victor Gabriel and Harry Morgan. You will also find folk art including cactus and coyotes from New Mexico's finest craftsmen.

The gallery is especially honored to be carrying the works of Fran Larsen this fall. Fran's watercolors of Pueblo scenes are prized by collectors throughout the country.

Another featured artist is Gary Yazzie. Gary's scenes of western riders and Indian ceremonial life are a rich reflection of his Navajo heritage.

At Painted Desert you will receive the benefit of years of travel and collecting throughout the southwest by the owners, Emmy and Bob Ames. Bob is a native of Arizona and a member of the Hopi Tribe. He travels to Arizona frequently where he serves as chief judge of the Hopi Tribal Court.

Emmy has been purchasing art and jewelry for private collectors for many years and now enjoys bringing examples of the finest workmanship to you at Painted Desert.

The shop is at 36 W. Alisal St., Salinas. Call 757-2536.

THE HAT*, a 24-by-36-inch acrylic, is among the new paintings by Kipp Stewart showcased at the Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel. Stewart's designs will be featured throughout October at the gallery located on Sixth Avenue at Mission Street.

Zantman Art Galleries showcase Kipp Stewart originals

Kipp Stewart was born in Pennsylvania and moved to California as an infant. During his four years at the Chouinard Art Institute in Los Angeles, he studied architecture, color and design. After graduation he taught at Chouinard and at the Jepson Art Studios.

Since the mid-'50s, Stewart has had his own design practice and most of his activities have been in the fields of architecture, furniture design and graphics. In the Monterey area, he is perhaps best known as the designer of the Ventana Inn in Big Sur which was voted Best Country Inn in 1986.

Stewart began painting about 1970. He has had 14 one-man shows in California and New York, and has participated in many group shows. He has been awarded many commissions by corporations throughout the country; most of these are the large canvases for which he is so well known.

His furniture has also been singled out for its excellence and a number of his pieces have been exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, receiving major national and international design awards.

Kipp Stewart's newest paintings will be on display for the entire month of October at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth Avenue and Mission Street in downtown Carmel. Hours are 10 to 9 daily, 10 to 5 Wednesday.

Muster Participants

THIS SUNDAY firefighters from all over Monterey County will again participate in the Carmel-by-the-Sea Volunteer Fire Department's annual Muster. These firefighters come from fire departments that differ widely – some come from all-volunteer organizations, some represent fully paid career departments. What all the participants have in common is a unique dedication to the protection of life and property from the tragedy of fire.

CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF FORESTRY & FIRE PROTECTION

Participant 1980 1981 1982 1983 1984 1986 1987 1988 1989

The California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection serves all the "State Responsibility Areas" in Monterey County, and also contracts for structural fire protection for the unincorporated areas of Carmel and Pebble Beach. Working out of three fire stations (Carmel Hill, Rio Road, and Pebble Beach), CDF's structural firefighting equipment includes three engines, a ladder truck, and a rescue squad. Although the CDF firefighters are paid career firefighters, Rio Road maintains a volunteer fire company as well.

The area is primarily residential but also includes two shopping centers and several golf and tennis resort centers. Overall Winner 1980

Monterey Fire Department is the oldest organized fire department on the Monterey Peninsula, founded in 1884 as a volunteer fire department with a hand-pulled two-wheel hose cart and 25 volunteers. In 1890, the city fathers of Monterey hired the first paid fire chief, William Parker, who remained as fire chief until 1940. Under Chief Parker's leadership, the department fought many major fires, including a devastating oil fire and the Del Monte Hotel fire in 1924, and the Del Mar Canning Company fire in 1936. Today, the Monterey Fire Department maintains three stations and serves an area of over eleven square miles.

NAVAL POSTGRADUATE SCHOOL FIRE DEPARTMENT

One of two federal fire departments on the Monterey Peninsula, the Naval Postgraduate School Fire Department has been in existence since the old Del Monte Hotel was converted to US Navy property in 1951. Working out of two stations, the career firefighters serve a military and civilian population at the Navy School itself and in the La Mesa housing area. The 600-plus acres served contain schools, churches, stores, and residences, making the Naval Postgraduate School a community within a community.

In December 1885 the "First Call Fire Department" was formed by fourteen civic-minded citizens of Pacific Grove. The first fire station was in a shed at Fountain and High Streets which also housed the Pacific Grove Curfew Bell, which was used to summon the firefighters as well as sounding the nightly 10 PM curfew. In 1930, the first paid firefighter was hired, and by the fifties, the department had a paid fire chief and was housed in the present location on Pine Avenue. At present the Pacific Grove Fire Department has a paid staff of over twenty and over thirty volunteers. The department protects the incorporated City of Pacific Grove. One unique service that the Pacific Grove Fire Department offers is the hyperbaric hamber used in the treatment of diving accident victims. It is the only facility of its kind in the United States outside a medical facility and operated by a fire department.

SPRECKELS VOLUNTEER FIRE COMPANY

Participant 1980 1981 1982 1983 1984 1986 1987 1988 1989

Overall Winner 1982 1984

Sportsmanship Award 1980 1981

The Spreckels Volunteer Fire Company was first organized in 1889 to provide a voluntary emergency service. Originally known as "Hose Company No. 1" the department first met in a scale house located near the Pajaro Valley Railroad tracks in Spreckels. In 1912, when the Louvre Restaurant and Saloon closed, the building was remodeled into the Firehall, which is now used for meetings and other social functions of the company. In 1972, a new station was constructed on the site of the original fire bell tower adjacent to the old Firehall, and houses the four engines the company maintains.

Being a volunteer fire fighter offers one reward few other jobs can match.

Few jobs offer you the opportunity to save a life. But as a volunteer fire fighter, you could be called upon to do it at a moment's notice.

That's why we need people with a strong desire to help others. And people with courage and dedication to the job they do.

Because this job is so important, we make sure all of our volunteer fire fighters are expertly trained and properly equipped.

So if you want to do something important for your community and are willing to take on a challenging job, come down to the fire station and talk to us.

And for your efforts, you may receive the best reward any job can give.

Fireplay leading cause of fire death of preschool age children

FIREPLAY IS the leading cause of fire deaths among preschoolers. It kills three out of every 10 children of preschool age who die in residential structure fires in the United States.

Fire Prevention Week 1989 (Oct. 8-14), focuses on the need for improved fire safety education, particularly match and lighter safety. The theme this year is "Big Fires Start Small: Keep matches and lighters in the right hands."

About 75 percent of all residential fires in the United States are started with a match or lighter, and matches and lighters are what children most frequently use when playing with fire.

Keeping matches, lighters and other heat sources where children can't obtain them is a good way to start making your home more fire safe. Teach your children (or grandchildren), that matches and lighters are tools for adults only, and reward them for bringing matches and lighters that they find to an adult.

Here are some facts about kids and fire:

- More than 300 people die in residential fires each year as a result of child fireplay.
- Three quarters of all fatalities of child-playing fires are 5 years old or younger.
- Curiosity is the most common reason children play with fire.
- Each year more than 28,000 residential fires are caused by child fireplay, with an annual loss in direct property damage in excess of $150,000,000.
- Smoke detectors are not present in 84 percent of the homes where preschool fatalities occur.

Strong support offered by local insurance agents

THE INDEPENDENT Insurance Agents and Brokers of the Monterey Peninsula are the financial support behind local fire department fire prevention and public education activities.

The fire department-insurance agent relationship is a partnership that provides a balance of knowledge and resources needed to educate and increase public awareness of fire prevention.

Without the support of the Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers, fire departments would have little printed literature or hand-out materials, such as the popular "Little Red Fire Helmets," to augment their fire safety lessons.

Without the fire departments' knowledge and efforts, red fire helmets alone will not teach children how to prevent fire or other valuable fire safety lessons. It is a team effort and commitment.

The fire departments on the Monterey Peninsula — Monterey, Seaside, Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach, Carmel, Carmel Highlands, Rio Road/CSA 43, Mid Carmel Valley, and Carmel Valley — express a sincere thank-you to the members of the Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers of the Monterey Peninsula for their strong and continued commitment to the safety of life and property. Their support is given not only during Fire Prevention Week activities, but for prevention and education activities year-round.

The Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers, like fire departments, are not only in the business of reacting to disaster such as fire, but more than one may know, are involved in the "proactive" role of preventing disaster.

Red hats and literature will be distributed and there will be exhibits and demonstrations on all aspects of fire and life safety at the Carmel Muster-by-the-Sea, Sunday, Oct. 7 at Sunset Center, and at the Del Monte Shopping Center from 10 a.m to 5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 13.

For more information on life and property protection in general, contact your local fire department or Independent Insurance Agent or Broker of the Monterey Peninsula.

Water conservation is a top priority in Carmel

THE CITY of Carmel-by-the-Sea has been in the water conservation business for more than 10 years.

After the drought of 1976, the city installed a 10,000-gallon holding tank in Mission Trails Park, collecting surface run-off water which would otherwise go into Carmel Bay. Several years later, a second 10,000-gallon tank was installed at the foot of Ocean Avenue to collect water from an underground spring which would otherwise go directly into the Pacific Ocean.

During these past several dry years, the Carmel Department of Public Works and the fire department have used these two water sources almost exclusively. The Department of Public Works distributes 6,500 gallons per week to residents for their personal irrigating needs, and uses 3,000 gallons per week for irrigation of city mini-parks and trees. All this comes from the Mission Trails Park holding tank. Another 10,000 gallons is used every other day for the new plantings along the Carmel Beach walkway, and comes from the natural spring tank at the foot of Ocean Avenue.

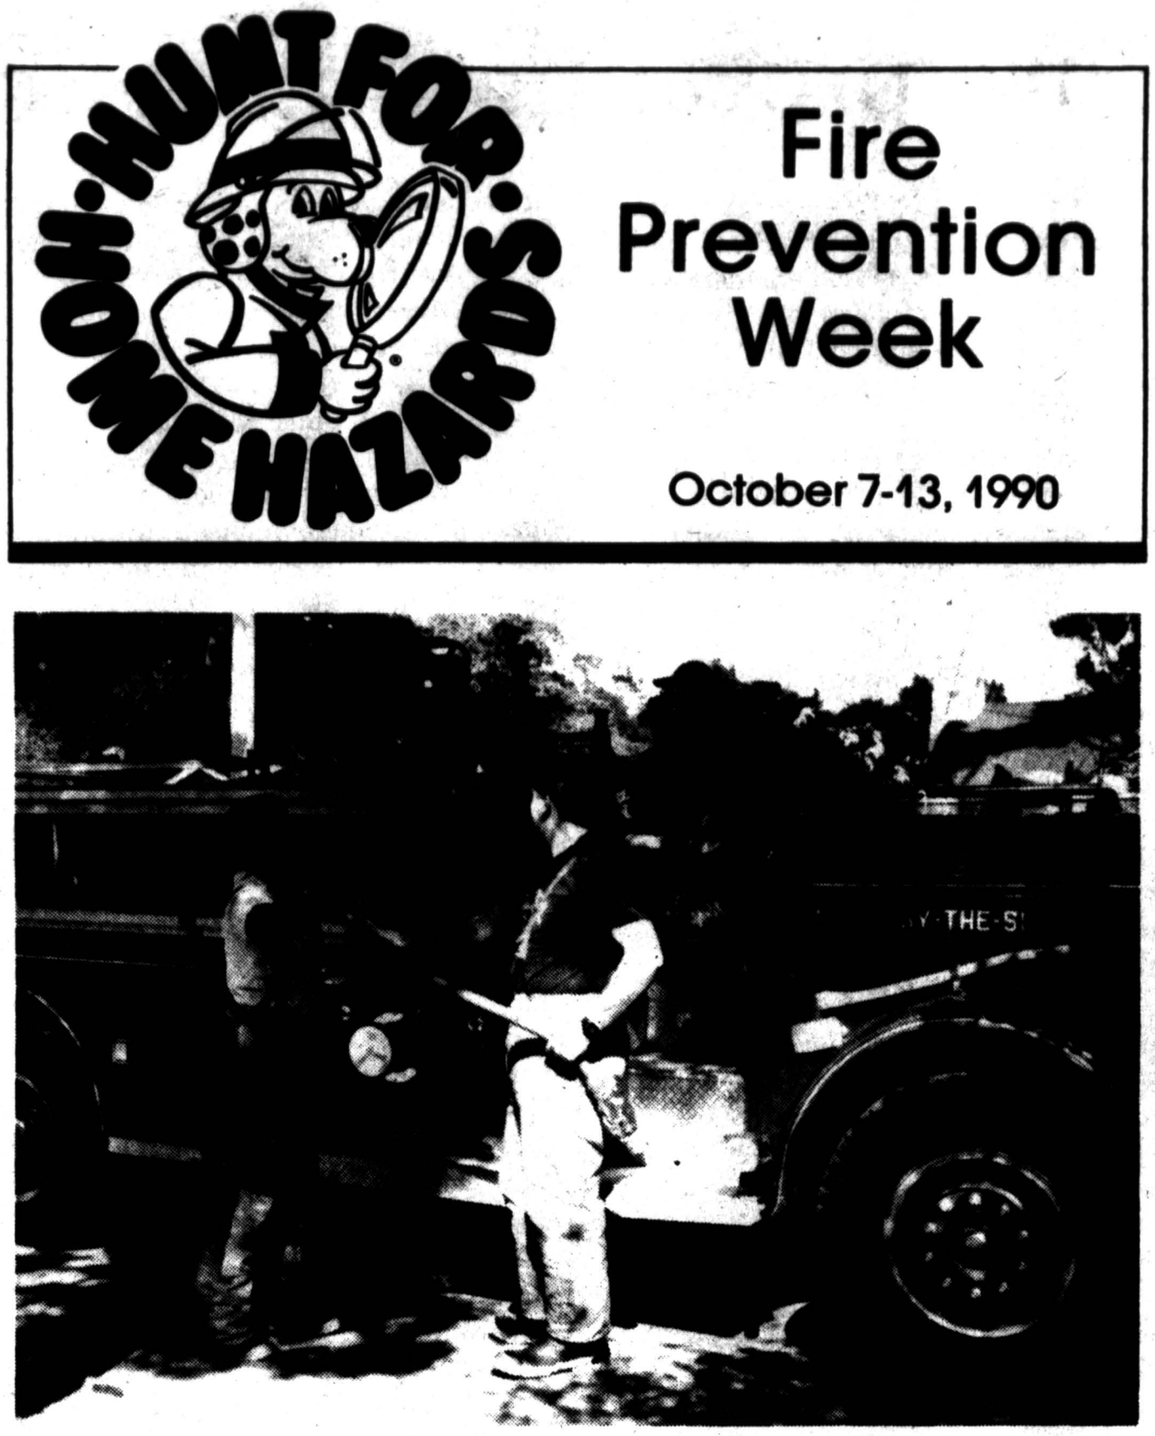
The fire department uses this water, too. Unless a hydrant water supply is necessary for a structure fire, all water used in the fire engines for car fires and other small incidents is from one or the other of these two tanks.

Additionally, all water used in maintenance and cleaning of fire hose and for most station maintenance work (washing cars, etc.), is used from one of the 500-gallon tanks on the fire engines.

For this weekend's Muster-by-the-Sea, all water used in all events will come from the city's holding tanks. The Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department has donated the use of its tanker to help shuttle water from the tanks to Sunset Center. Most of the water used will run off downhill to Mission Trails Park, and be "recycled" again.

According to City Forester Gary Kelly, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea uses some Cal-Am water, but has converted all public restroom facilties and public building restrooms to low-flow toilets and sinks, and uses low-volume drip irrigation where practical when Cal-Am water is being used for irrigation purposes.

"We have seen a definite reduction in the use of Cal-Am water over the past several years," said Kelly.



CARMEL FIRE Department Engineer Ian Watts (left), and firefighter August Beacham help in another emergency — the drought. The Carmel Fire Department shares the duty of water delivery to residents and businesses. The water is obtained from a natural spring near the Del Mar area of Carmel Beach. Started in 1987 with only eight takers, the program now delivers 20,000 gallons to 200 participants. The water is not drinkable. (Photo courtesy of the Carmel Fire Department.)

Fire prevention has a long and fiery history

FIRE PREVENTION Week is being observed this year during the week of Oct. 8-14. It is celebrated annually in the United States and Canada, always during the week which contains Oct. 9th, the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire of 1871.

Historically, fire prevention is uppermost on the minds of people in the immediate aftermath of a disaster — similar to the old saying "closing the barn door after the horse has been stolen."

The first fire prevention codes in modern history were signed into law by the Governor of New Amsterdam in 1628, when a major structure fire in that colony spurred the requirement of mandatory chimney inspections. Twenty years later in 1648, Peter Stuyvesant organized fire wardens for fire inspections in New Amsterdam.

After the Great London Fire of 1666, which was a conflagration that consumed 436 acres of London valued at over 10 million pounds sterling (and those were 17th century pounds!), British Parliament enacted legislation which created the Fire Insurance Office.

In 1860, as a result of a disastrous tenement fire in which 20 people died, the New York City council passed an ordinance requiring fireproof stairs or fire escapes.

In 1871, the Great Chicago Fire broke out in the waning hours of Oct. 8. During that terrible Oct. 9th, the fire killed 250 people and caused millions of dollars worth of property damage. The legend of Mrs. O'Leary's cow may not have been too far off the mark — the fire actually began around the O'Leary barn. Ironically, that site is now the location of the Chicago Fire Academy.

Only a year later, the Great Fire of Boston destroyed over a square mile of the business district, bankrupting over seventy fire insurance companies. Those surviving insurers set up the National Board of Fire Underwriters to set up rules for insurance companies to follow. The NBFU still exists as the Insurance Service Office (ISO)

In 1904, the General Slocum, an excursion steamer, caught fire in New York harbor. Over a thousand lives were lost, and an inspection program was begun for harbored ships.

In 1911, the Triangle Shirtwaist Co. factory fire in New York City took 150 lives, and led to the establishment of the Life Safety Committee of the National Fire Prevention Association. In the same year, the NFPA also established Fire Prevention Day on the 40th anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire.

Nine years later, in 1920, President Woodrow Wilson was the first United States president to proclaim Fire Prevention Day nationally. In 1922, the observance was extended to a full week, and was so proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding.

Tragic fires still occur, and unfortunately, it still takes a tragedy for existing fire and building codes to be reviewed and strengthened.

In 1942, at the height of World War II, the Cocoanut Grove Night Club in Boston caught fire, and took almost 500 lives. That fire led to a re-evaluation of fire prevention codes and a strengthening of requirements for combustibles in public places and exiting regulations.

The Beverly Hills Supper Club was located in suburban Cincinnati, just over the Kentucky state line. In the late seventies it caught fire, and 165 people were caught in the fire. That fire again brought attention to just how important it is to comply with fire codes — the life loss was caused by many violations of existing fire codes including combustible interior decorations, open vertical stairshafts, overcrowding, and inadequate exits.

Most recently, in 1980 the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas experienced a terrible fire in which 85 people died. Fire codes for high-rise buildings were modified after that fire.

These fires are the fires that garner the headlines — but the real killer fires are ordinary single-family residence fires. Over 5,000 residential fires are fought by fire departments in the United States every day. Most fire deaths are in residential fires. The use of smoke detectors and residential sprinkler systems save lies every day of the year — have you checked your smoke detector lately?

The 1989 National Fire Protection Association's Fire Prevention Week theme is "Big Fires Start Small," which stresses the need to keep lighters and matches out of the hands of small children.

Make your home fire safe for Fire Prevention Week

Each year, roughly six thousand Americans die in fires. In 1988 more people died in fires than in any year since 1981, and four-fifths of those people died in their own homes or apartments.

During Fire Prevention Week 1990, the National Fire Protection Association and the Carmel-by-the-Sea Fire Department are spotlighting these tragic home fire deaths and the simple steps that you can take to protect yourself and your family.

The people most in danger in home fires are the very young and the very old. If there are young children or older individuals in your household, please consider their safety and make a special effort to "make your place firesafe."

You can quickly make your home more firesafe if you know where the greatest dangers lie. The most frequent single cause of fire deaths in homes in the United States is the careless use of smoking materials. Even more fires (though fewer deaths) are caused by heating equipment, particularly wood stoves, other space heaters, chimneys and portable heaters that have been designed or installed incorrectly, maintained poorly, or misused. And the largest number of residential fire injuries happen in fires that start in the kitchen.

Lighters, Matches and Smoking Materials

If you smoke, always use large, heavy ashtrays and don't let them become over-full. Before emptying ashtrays into the trash, put water in them to make sure the butts and ashes are extinguished.

If there are very young people in your household, the danger of fire from smoking is particularly great. Teach your children that matches and lighters are tools for adults to use, not toys. In addition, keep matches and lighters out of children's reach. That means keeping them above the "strike zone," from the floor to the highest point your child can reach.

Before you go to bed after a party, check for smoldering cigarettes under cushions of couches and chairs. A cigarette that falls into an upholstered chair can smolder for hours before bursting into flame, often after the household is asleep.

And please: never smoke in bed.

Heating Equipment

Have your heating system professionally inspected at least once a year, and any other time you suspect a problem.

If you have a wood-burning stove or space heater, check with the fire department or building department to make sure it is installed properly. Clothes, furniture, and newspapers should be kept well away from all types of stoves, fireplaces, and space heaters.

To reduce the risk of chimney fires, burn only well-seasoned wood. Keep your fire a moderate size, and never use your stove or fireplace to burn trash. This could send burning fragments up the chimney and ignite the creosote coating. Never leave a fire unattended. Use a fireplace screen to keep sparks from flying into the room and install a spark arrester atop your chimney. It is also a very good idea to have your chimney professionally inspected and cleaned by a licensed, certified chimney sweep at least once a year.

Portable heaters can pose a special fire hazard. Make sure your heater is tested and listed by a testing laboratory. Portable electric heaters must be used with great care, placed away from combustibles, and away from doorways and other traffic paths. Remember, kerosene heaters are not permitted to be used as residential space heaters in the State of California.

Careless Cooking

In the kitchen, be aware that stove burners and ovens can start fires of inflict serious burns.

– Never leave your cooking unattended.

– Do not store things over the stove, where someone may be burned while reaching for them. Remove any curtains which could easily be ignited.

– Wear short or close-fitting sleeves when cooking; loose clothing can catch fire.

– Keeping your stove and oven clean reduces the risk of kitchen fires.

– Turn pot handles inward so they can't be knocked off the stove or pulled down by small children. Make sure your children understand that they can be severely burned if they overturn a pot or an electrical appliance like a coffeepot.

– If a grease fire starts on your stove, do not put water on it. Instead, slide a lid over the burning pan to extinguish the flames, then turn off the burner.

Plan and Practice Escape

The majority of fatal home fires strike at night, while people are asleep, so every home needs smoke detectors to wake people up before they are overcome by smoke.

Smoke detectors are the most effective low-cost firesafe devices you can buy. With a smoke detector, your risk of dying in a residential fire is cut in half.

If you don't have smoke detectors in your home, install them today! If you already have smoke detectors, maintain them regularly according to the manufacturer's instructions. The smoke detector is your first line of defense to wake you up in time to escape.

In case a fire does start, everyone in your home should know how to escape, because escape may not be as easy as walking out the door.

Plan two exits from every room of your home. The more escape routes you have, the better. Agree on one place outside where all members of your family will meet after escaping. Practice your escape routes at least once every six months.

Most fires can be prevented. But in case a fire does break out, make sure your family will be awakened by smoke detectors, and that they have practiced how to escape.

History of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Fire Dept.

A 1930 Mack engine (top photo), was the second motorized fire engine that Carmel purchased and was in service until 1966. Above, the array of fire-fighting equipment that was once used by the department, including a motorcycle.

"CARMEL CHEMICAL No. 1" was born in the aftermath of a fire that threatened the entire community of Carmel.

On July 16, 1915, over a year before the incorporation of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, the Fire Department By-Laws were adopted with a primary objective being the "protection of property from and during fires as may occur in Carmel and vicinity."

Under the direction of Foreman B. W. Adams, Carmel Chemical No. 1 operated a Stempel 40-gallon soda-acid wagon, a hand-pulled hose cart, and purchased a klaxon siren for the firehouse, which was located at Ocean and Dolores.

Early in 1916, Assistant Foreman Jess Nichols succeeded Adams. Carmel Chemical No. 1 was reorganized as a legal fire company on April 12, 1916, and Jess Nichols became the first Fire Chief of the Carmel Volunteer Fire Department. In January 1923 the first piece of motorized apparatus arrived in Carmel — a Luverne chemical pumper, manufactured in Luverne, Minnesota, and purchased for $5,100 through the Bank of Monterey.

In December 1925 Chief Nicholas retired, and Robert Leidig became Fire Chief. During Chief Leidig's tenure, the department grew and progressed, acquiring a 1930 Mack fire engine and a 1931 Model A Ford.

Chief Leidig is remembered primarily in the field of fire prevention, since he continued as the city's first Fire Marshal until 1966 after passing the Chief's duties to Vincent Torras, Sr in 1941. Chief Torras served 15 years as the fourth and last volunteer fire chief, and under his direction the department purchased a 1947 Chevrolet and 1 1953 GMC/Van Pelt fire engine.

In July 1956, Robert E. Smith was hired by the Carmel City Council as the Carmel Fire Department's first paid fire chief, a position he held for nine years, until March 1965. During that time, the department acquired a 1963 American LaFrance pumper. From March 1965 until October 1965, Assistant Chief James Belvail served as Acting Chief.

In October 1965, J. R. Baker was hired as the Fire Chief, and the 1966 American LaFrance pumper he ordered was delivered in October 1966 after Chief Baker had left the department. Once again, Assistant Chief Belvail served as Acting Chief, and served until his retirement in 1970. Assistant Chief Robert Updike was then named Fire Chief, and held that position until his retirement last month.

On Sept. 9, 1988, Assistant Chief Bill Hill was named as Fire Chief succeeding Chief Updike. In the year that Chief Hill has overseen the Fire Department, a new 1988 Beck custom fire engine was purchased and two older engines were sold, computers were acquired, and many other new programs have been initiated.

You'll need more than the right shoe size to fill these boots.

It takes a special person to fill the boots of a volunteer fire fighter.

Someone with a desire to do something important for the community. Someone with courage and dedication, who isn't afraid of hard work, and is willing to accept the challenge of a difficult job.

It takes a person who considers respect and appreciation reward enough. And who is just glad to help.

If you're this kind of person, you're needed as a volunteer fire fighter. Come down to the firehouse and talk to us. We might be able to fit you with a pair of boots.
